IN MEMORIAM

We honor our Spelman sisters. If you receive notice of the death of a Spelman sister, please contact the Office of Alumnae Engagement at 404-270-5048 or Linda Hart Patton, C'88, Director of Alumnae Operations, at lpatton@spelman.edu. For verification purposes, please include a printed program, newspaper acknowledgment or electronic link with your submission.

Update on the Spelman Messenger Publication Schedule

After thoughtful consideration, Spelman College will transition the Spelman Messenger from a twice-yearly publication to an annual edition. This change allows us to more effectively steward both financial and staffing resources while maintaining the quality and impact of the magazine.

We remain fully committed to the Messenger's role as the official alumnae publication of Spelman College. Each issue will continue to deliver meaningful, engaging content that highlights College news and milestones, celebrates alumnae achievements, and reflects Spelman's leadership on issues that matter to our community.

The Spelman Messenger is published once a year by Spelman College, 350 Spelman Lane, S.W., Atlanta, Georgia 30314-4399, free of charge for alumnae, donors, trustees and friends of the College. Recipients wishing to change the address to which the Spelman Messenger is sent should notify the editor, giving both old and new addresses. Third-class postage paid at Atlanta, Georgia. Publication No. 510240

CREDO

Founded in 1885, the Spelman Messenger is the alumnae magazine of Spelman College and is committed to educating, serving and empowering Black women. The content of the Messenger is designed to share news and events about the College and alumnae, as well as discuss Spelman's leadership role in addressing a wide range of issues relevant to our community.

ON THE COVER

In this issue, we celebrate “A Future Ready Spelman: Leading with Vision & Impact” by highlighting alumnae who embody the power of a Spelman education to shape industries, communities and futures.

Building the Future of Spelman College

Dear Spelman Sisters,

It is being said that these are unprecedented times possibly reminiscent of the Reconstruction era that began in 1865 which attempted to redefine citizenship and democracy. There was massive polarization and freedoms were under constant threat. Spelman College was born inside that story. And now, 145 years later, we find ourselves living inside yet a very similar period of Reconstruction.

In 1881, led by abolitionist Harriet E. Giles and Sophia B. Packard, 11 formerly enslaved women gathered in a church basement with $100 and a conviction that Black women deserved to take their full place in the world. What they built became Spelman College. What we build next is up to us.

A Campaign Equal to the Moment

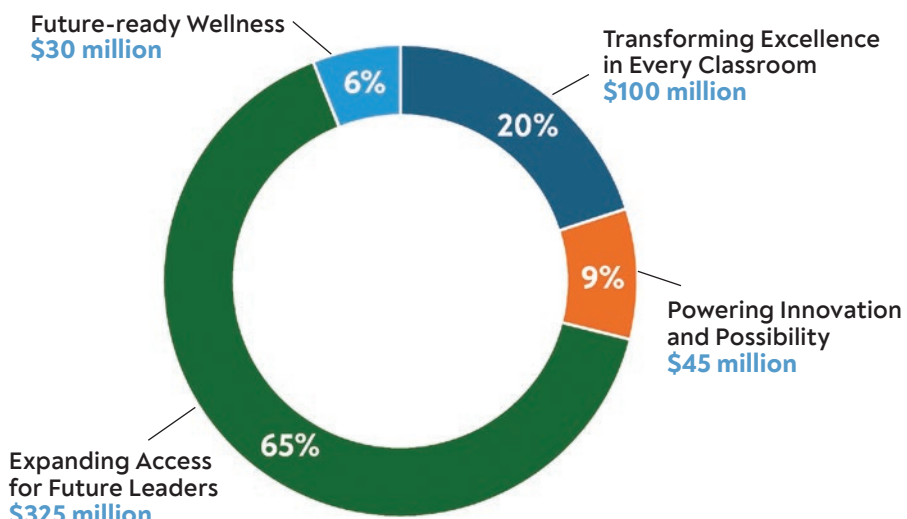

That founding conviction has built the finest HBCU in the nation. Now we must build what comes next.

It is my honor to introduce our most ambitious campaign in Spelman's history: Spelman Forward, a $500 million campaign dedicated to building a future-ready Spelman. This campaign is a fundamental response to the structural forces reshaping higher education. We are not becoming a different Spelman; rather, we are leaning into our mission. This effort is driven not simply by what Spelman has been but by what our students need us to become. We are not changing who we are. We are making certain this mission is worthy of the women it serves.

Built on a Promise

Each of these investments reflects a promise this college has never broken: our values endure, and our students deserve an institution built to match them. Spelman Forward is how we keep it, expanding scholarship support, deepening academic innovation and modernizing the infrastructure that powers their education.

The Longer Arc

Spelman women do not just change their own lives. They change the rooms they enter, the institutions they lead and the communities they return to.

In a world that has never needed principled, equity-minded leadership more urgently, we are not a regional institution serving a specific community. We are a global asset, and what happens here echoes far beyond these walls.

Black women are the most credentialed and least resourced graduates in American higher education. They carry more debt, face more barriers to capital, and still spend careers proving themselves in rooms that were not built with them in mind. We exist to change that, and the proof is in our graduates: they lead companies, run hospitals, write policy, and go back to their communities to do it again for the next generation. None of that happens without access.

There are young women who belong here who cannot get here. There are students on this campus right now whose financial pressures have nothing to do with their ability and everything to do with the structures they were born into. The young woman sitting in a Spelman classroom today is brilliant, determined and already carrying more than she should have to. She deserves an institution that carries some of that weight with her. Spelman Forward is how we close that distance for the women who will walk through these doors over the next decade and for every life they will go on to shape.

Proof of the Mission

Our campaign is about people, and no one makes that more undeniable than the Spelman women who carry this institution's mission into the world every day. I became a Spelman woman in 1984, part of the first generation in my family to graduate from college. My father passed away while I was a student here. My mother carried the weight of my education on her own, working long hours to make sure I could finish what we had all started together. And through all of it, she used to say: "You only have what you give away." I didn't fully understand that until I came back to this special place. What Spelman gave me, I have spent my career trying to give back: to the women who came after me, to the institutions worth protecting, to the work that outlasts any one of us.

I have also had the privilege of serving this institution as Chair of our Board, and now as our Interim President. That vantage point: student, steward, leader makes me more certain than ever that our best days are ahead. The board that helped shape this campaign shares that certainty and stands fully behind it. This campaign will outlast any one of us. That is the point. The women in these pages are proof of why it matters, and this issue celebrates six of them:

Dr. Terri McFadden, C'81, a respected public health leader whose work reflects our enduring commitment to service and impact.

Renee Chube Washington, C'84, my classmate, whose entrepreneurial leadership reflects the determination, creativity and excellence that define Spelman women.

Dr. Maléka Ingram, C'95, a leader in digital technology who has returned home to help advance critical learning initiatives, including eSpelman.

Rani Johnson, C'97, a global technology leader helping shape an industry that continues to redefine how we live and work.

Ciara Smith, C'2020, representing a rising generation of graduates already leading change and carrying this mission forward.

Dr. Joyce Johnson, our "adopted" sister, a pioneering artist whose work has graced some of the world's most esteemed stages.

What You Leave Behind

I am asking you to make a gift to Spelman Forward. Not because this institution needs to be saved, but because it deserves to be strengthened, and because the women who will come through these doors over the next decade deserve to inherit something equal to their potential. Your gift, whatever you are able to give, is a declaration that you believe what we have always believed: that when you invest in a Black woman, you are investing in the world.

I invite you to claim your part in this work. Together, we can ensure we remain rooted in our legacy, responsive to this moment and ready for the future, with doors open wide for every young woman called to learn, lead and serve, including the ones already here, who will one day build what comes after us.

With love, gratitude and resolve,

The Mic Has Always Been Ours

Spelman College's new podcast is putting Black women's brilliance at the center of AI, Innovation and Tech — and the world is listening

ANGELA GEORGE, C'90

THE RED RECORDING LIGHT switches on inside Spelman College's Spotify Podcast Studio. Provost Mark Lee, Ph.D., leans toward the microphone — and then does something that still does not happen nearly enough in rooms where innovation and artificial intelligence are discussed. He turns to the women across the table and asks them what they think.

What follows is the kind of conversation that makes you pull up a chair, grab a cup of coffee and listen from beginning to end to Spelman's flagship academic-centered podcast series — "Echoes and Algorithms." In a media landscape where women of color represent just 6.6% of hosts across the Top 100 podcasts in America — and appear as expert voices in fewer than 8% of technology episodes — what Dr. Lee is building matters well beyond campus walls. African Americans make up 43% of monthly podcast listeners in the United States, and more than half are women. They are tuning in, turning up, and still waiting for conversations that reflect their expertise and ambition.

Echoes and Algorithms was created for them. Echoes and Algorithms was created by us.

Advancing Black Feminist Scholarship

Audre Lorde's Papers Draw Visiting Scholars to Spelman

BY CIERRA CHULY BOYD

IN SUMMER 2025, SPELMAN COLLEGE became a living site of scholarship and discovery as two visiting doctoral researchers engaged in immersive study within the Audre Lorde Papers, one of the most widely used collections housed in the Spelman Archives.

Through the Audre Lorde Travel Grant, each scholar received a $2,500 award to support an in-person research visit to the Archives. The grant is supported by a $25,000 gift dedicated to advancing research in the Audre Lorde Papers.

Additionally, an $88,000 unrestricted gift from Spelman alumna and former academic dean Dr. Jacqueline Jones Royster, C'70—the largest unrestricted donation in the Archives' history—is also helping strengthen the Archives' ability to preserve, digitize, and share collections documenting the intellectual and cultural contributions of women of the African diaspora.

These awards support in-person research visits to the Archives, where scholars examined Lorde's manuscripts, correspondence, and personal materials that illuminate the life and work of the influential poet, essayist, and activist. The program advances research and public engagement centered on Black feminist thought and the scholarship of Black women.

Paige Chapman, a doctoral student at The Pennsylvania State University, visited Spelman in June 2025, to explore Audre Lorde's self-care practices, particularly her use of alternative and holistic medicine and how they shaped her ethical commitments.

"It meant so much to work with Audre Lorde's papers so intimately," Chapman said. "Feeling the paper she once wrote on and seeing her annotations was unforgettable. I gained a deeper appreciation for memory work and the care Spelman's archivists bring to preserving her legacy."

In July 2025, MarChé Daughtry, a doctoral candidate at Indiana University Bloomington, traveled to campus to study how Lorde's work informs her research on Black disabled women, their sexuality, and their representation.

"Conducting research at Spelman was deeply meaningful both intellectually and personally," Daughtry said. "Lorde's work, which examines many of the concepts central to my dissertation, made Spelman an excellent site for my research. On a personal level, as a Black disabled researcher, being in a space where my work was fully embraced was incredibly affirming."

The opportunity reflects the growing impact of the Spelman Archives as a center for research on the intellectual and cultural contributions of women of the African diaspora. As part of the Women's Research and Resource Center, the Archives preserves significant collections documenting Black feminist scholarship, including those of Toni Cade Bambara and Dr. Johnnetta B. Cole.

From the very first show, Dr. Lee made a deliberate choice: center the women as the focal point of the conversation. The inaugural episode, "AI and Liberal Arts Education," featured the "Provost Vision Grant" winners Drs. Nicole Taylor, C'2004, Michelle Hite, and Cynthia Neal Spence, C'78 — making the case for why HBCUs must help write the ethical rules for emerging technologies before those technologies write the rules for us. Subsequent episodes push the conversation further. In "AI, Global Justice, and Model UN at Spelman," China expert John Wagner Givens, DPhil, and student leader Lauren Chase Dent, C'2026, examine the global policy stakes of artificial intelligence — from surveillance technology to the environmental and social costs of data infrastructure.

"Black Girls, Big Ideas: How Spelman Is Shaping the Future of Tech" takes listeners inside the Arthur M. Blank Innovation Lab, where alumnae Jaycee Holmes, C'2016, and Blanca Burch, C'2022, alongside student Temple Dees, C'2027, are changing the tech landscape by respectively launching the HBCU Game Jam, researching how AI represents Black hair and identity, and developing PlantGPT, an innovation using AI to monitor a plant's health data. Another episode features Drs. Leyte Winfield, Ph.D., who built Spelman's pioneering cosmetic science program, and economist Miesha Williams, who answered the call to develop the popular Business of Beauty course. Together, they explain why Spelman graduates are becoming sought-after leaders in a multibillion-dollar global industry.

Several podcast guests are alumnae who returned as faculty — proof that the pipeline from student to scholar to public intellectual runs straight through this campus. Future episodes will spotlight Spelman's expanding cybersecurity work and other frontiers where Spelman women are defining what comes next.

Spelman College Celebrates Collaboration and Community at the Grand Opening of the Mary Schmidt Campbell Center for Innovation & the Arts

BY TAYLOR R. JONES, C'2015

LAST SPRING, SPELMAN COLLEGE commemorated the historic grand opening of the Mary Schmidt Campbell Center for Innovation & the Arts (CI&A) with a series of multi-day celebrations. Events invited donors, faculty and staff, and friends to help launch this transformative learning environment designed to foster interdisciplinary collaboration and strengthen ties between the College and the local community.

Positioned as the “front porch” of the campus, this 82,500-square-foot facility spanning five stories sits just beyond the gates with an elevated walkway to provide direct, secure access to campus for students, faculty and staff.

A series of lively events marked the grand opening of the CI&A. A special campus celebration for Theater & Performance majors and the broader Spelman community featured a drum procession, t-shirt giveaways, and lawn games, while a community-focused gathering offered a guided tour led by CI&A’s inaugural artistic director, Barbara Chirinos.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony and a grand opening program further honored the donors whose support made this $96 million expansion project possible.

“[The CI&A] is a place where creativity and discovery converge, where artists, scientists, and entrepreneurs can push boundaries and redefine what is possible,” said Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., 10th President of Spelman College. “Now a reality, this extraordinary space stands as a testament to the power of bold ideas, imagination, philanthropy, and an unwavering belief in Spelman’s future.”

Thoughtfully designed by Studio Gang—integral features include shaded “porch” areas that extend outdoor gathering year-round, flexible classrooms, and event spaces that maximize natural light and reduce energy use. Additional collaborative features include digital media and gaming labs, a 3,200 square-foot black box theater with flexible seating for up to 171 guests, and a second gallery for the College’s Museum of Fine Art.

“This center will foster meaningful engagement with the greater Atlanta community through curated events, collaborations, and partnerships,” said Rosalind “Roz” Brewer, C’84, Interim President and Chair Emerita of Spelman College. “We look forward to welcoming artists, scientists, and entrepreneurs alike to engage in creative inquiry and push boundaries with us.”

A Future-ready Spelman: Leading with Vision & Impact

In this issue, we celebrate A Future-ready Spelman: Leading with Vision & Impact by highlighting alumnae who embody the power of a Spelman education to shape industries, communities and futures. Rooted in academic excellence and a legacy of leadership, Spelman College continues to prepare women to innovate in technology, build transformative enterprises and lead with purpose in a rapidly evolving world. The women featured in these pages, including a distinguished member of the Spelman community whose influence reaches far beyond the campus, are trailblazers across public health, entrepreneurship, digital innovation, global technology, the arts and a rising generation of changemakers. Together, they represent the living legacy of an institution that honors its traditions while boldly advancing toward the future.

New Trustee Receives Second Full-circle Moment With Her Alma Mater

BY ALLISON JOYNER

For Renee Chube Washington, C’84, chief operating officer for USA Track and Field (USATF), life is defined by “full-circle” moments. One such moment occurred when her daughter followed her footsteps to Spelman. Now, as she begins her second semester as the newest member of the Board of Trustees, she is experiencing another: the opportunity to sustain the pedigree of higher learning at her alma mater. She told the Messenger that her goal is to help Spelman produce leaders not just for the nation, but for the world.

“There’s no room for complacency,” Washington said. “We have to embrace the future and make sure that the young women are prepared for that. I can’t stress that enough. We have to always—always—challenge ourselves to make sure that we are providing what the young women need to succeed in an ever-increasingly complex world.”

From parochial school education to diversity-filled excellence, Washington grew up in Louisiana until eighth grade, and then moved with her family to Gary, Indiana, where she continued her middle and high school education in catholic school systems.

Even with the racial shift in the 1970s in the midwestern town, she admitted she was never taught by someone who looked like her.

As educators themselves, her parents wanted her to have the opportunity to be taught by teachers of color. They knew the only way to guarantee it was to insist she attend a Historically Black College or University (HBCU).

“I had always been in Catholic schools, and I never had a Black teacher,” Washington said. “My parents were in education. They had been educated in HBCUs, and there was no choice. ‘You’re going to an HBCU; you’re going to have the opportunity to have a teacher or teachers of color,’ and then there was, ‘No, you go to Spelman. End of story.’”

There was no kicking and screaming from Washington; she loved every moment of her Spelman matriculation, including the bonds she developed with the other students, and the ability to challenge each other and feel comfortable expressing herself in a safe environment. She said it helped create a foundation that is still part of who she is today.

As her time at Spelman came to an end, her parents once again insisted that she continue with her education, and off to law school she went. After her studies at Georgetown Law, Washington’s career started as a whirlwind after shortly meeting her husband, having her baby, and moving to Indianapolis six months later. The transition from motherhood to businesswoman was difficult, as she struggled to find appropriate childcare for daughter Campbell Washington, C’2014. So, she decided to take care of her daughter full-time, which did not make her parents happy when she told them.

“‘You went to Spelman and Georgetown Law School, and you’re a what?’” she recalled, which initially made her feel guilty about her choice at first, but she knew she was making the right decision for her young family. When she talks to young women about her decision, she tells them, “I’m a firm believer that you can have just about anything that you want. You may not have it all at the same time, but there is life after you make those decisions.”

After letting go of the guilt, she learned to embrace that period of her life by keeping her foot in the door of what was happening in the world through community engagement. Eventually that led to other career opportunities, including her current position at USATF as COO — a position she’s held for 14 years.

USATF drives competitive excellence and popular engagement for track and field, long-distance running and race walking in the U.S. This job entails developing and leading her team to global events such as the Olympics and World Championships. She attributes her confidence and resilience to several factors, but Mother Spelman is certainly near the top. The sense of belonging, the sense of complete support and the infusion of thought that you could be and do anything you set your mind to came directly from those treasured years at Spelman. Powerful lessons that never faded.

As it relates to her current position at USATF, Washington wants students to understand that being an athlete is a good thing, but it is not a prerequisite for a job in the sports industry. She says that fundamental degrees, like marketing, law, science, and accounting, are much needed in these fields. “They all need people with a financial background,” she said. “They need those who know how to write; they need those who understand social media, those who understand the body - from nutritional needs to biomechanics. Those basic tools that you learn in college or law school are needed in all of these industries.”

Knowing that Spelman’s pursuit of longevity is far from the finish line, Washington is ready to take the baton in the middle leg of the race. She thinks that it is important that all alumnae, students, and other stakeholders understand that the school is healthy and focused on its sustainability during these uncertain times.

“We have to embrace what is happening in our world,” Washington concluded. “And so, we have to prepare the students for the future. There’s a lot of talk about AI, and while some may view it as a challenge, it’s an opportunity. We have to make sure that our students have the skills that they need to meet that challenge and to be part of those conversations, including development of those tools, and not be left behind.”

Spelman College is Leading the Charge into the Digital Future

BY BRIJEA DANIEL

The recent rise in new technology has had an indelible impact on the way students learn, causing a monumental shift in the higher education landscape. As Spelman College works to adapt to higher ed's technological transformation, Associate Vice President of Digital Learning Initiatives Maléka Ingram, C'95, D.Sc., is leading the charge to ensure Spelman is sustainable for the next century.

In 2025, Dr. Ingram joined the College's eSpelman team, an online certificate program that launched in 2021 to support the upskilling and career exploration of working adult learners. Since graduating from Spelman, Ingram has spent over two decades sharpening her expertise in the intersection of education, equity and technological innovation. According to her, the lessons she learned from Spelman educators guided her steps.

"My Spelman education exposed me to faculty like Dr. Gloria Wade Gayles, who challenged us to be critical thinkers and researchers, and Christine King Farris, who taught us about inequities in K-12 public schools among Black and brown children, and Spelman's emphasis on community service instilled in me the importance of charitable work," said Ingram, who graduated with a degree in English. "These lessons influenced my transition from corporate into higher ed."

Prior to joining Spelman, Ingram served as the executive dean for Adler University Online Campus. There, she transformed their online graduate programs by improving processes and procedures, adjusting the curriculum and centralizing online program design and delivery. When she saw a similar role open for Spelman's online learning program in 2025, Ingram was confident she could grow eSpelman using her experience in corporate learning and development organizations and her expertise in online education for working adult learners.

In the future, Ingram hopes she and the team will grow the online offerings from its current five programs to at least 20. According to her, introducing courses focused on contemporary

"WE HAVE A RESPONSIBILITY TO TEACH BOTH OUR STUDENTS AND ESPELMAH LEARNERS HOW TO THINK CRITICALLY ABOUT TECHNOLOGY — NOT TO REJECT IT, BUT TO RESHAPE IT IN WAYS THAT PROTECT OUR PEOPLE, PRESERVE OUR CULTURE AND STRENGTHEN OUR COLLECTIVE FUTURE."

topics like finance and investing for women, marketing analytics, and artificial intelligence for educators and leaders will keep eSpelman competitive and prepared for the future of higher ed. "Higher education is undergoing a major shift. Instead of relying solely on traditional approaches, institutions must prioritize practical skill development and real-world knowledge. This will require rethinking the majors offered, how content is taught and delivered — moving toward more hands-on, experiential learning that integrates theory with practical application."

With the global online education market reaching over 73.8 million learners in 2024, according to a recent study, colleges and universities across the world are steadily investing in the digital learning landscape. Programs that embedded AI features into their digital learning platforms reported a 6% revenue increase, according to Pearson, indicating the growth opportunities available with technology integration. This expansion into digital learning and AI technologies has extended to Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs), with many historically Black institutions adopting AI frameworks into their curricula and partnering with other institutions and corporations to offer eLearning opportunities.

As HBCUs make the necessary shift to updated technology infrastructure and pedagogy, Ingram emphasized the responsibility we have as Black Americans to critically engage with new technologies in order to be the change we wish to see. “We cannot be passive consumers of technology. We must think critically about how we engage and create with it,” she said. “We must ensure we are represented in the larger technological ecosystem. We have a responsibility to teach both our students and eSpelman learners how to think critically about technology — not to reject it, but to reshape it in ways that protect our people, preserve our culture and strengthen our collective future.”

The Hands That Held Spelman: Seven Decades of Dr. Joyce Johnson's Quiet Revolution

BY ANGELA GEORGE

There's a specific moment every Spelman woman knows whether she graduated in 1960 or will cross the stage in 2026: she's sitting in Sisters Chapel for convocation or baccalaureate, maybe nervous about an exam or nursing a broken heart. Then the organ starts.

The sound doesn't announce itself. It rises like something that's always been there, like breathing. And if you happened to glance up at the organ loft between 1955 and today, you'd see the same woman — Joyce Finch Johnson, D.Mus., College organist and professor emerita of music, her hands moving across the keys with the kind of certainty that makes you sit up straighter in your pew.

That's 70 years of Sunday mornings. More than 7,000 times sitting down at that bench, creating the sonic architecture that holds Spelman's sacred moments.

But here's what the statistics miss: Johnson wasn't just playing music. She was teaching a master class in presence, in the radical act of being excellent in the same place for long enough that excellence becomes the standard.

"Often, through the years, while walking across the campus, I would encounter students who expressed appreciation for the organ music," Johnson recalled. "To know that they had actually listened to the organ gives me great joy."

"When you're in college you need a way to ground yourself," Pamela George, C'82, recalled. "Dr. Johnson helped me discard the grunt of the week and just be at peace. My grandmother said, 'eat the fish and throw away the bones.' Quiet Hour helped me do that. It was spiritual for me."

In Norman Rates' memoir "May Thy Dear Walls Remain," student after student testifies to the transformative power of those weekly gatherings. Kim Bronson, C'86, wrote: "During my freshman year, I would steal away and sit in the back of the Chapel and listen to Dr. Johnson play the organ. The Chapel was dark and calm and gave me a chance to unwind."

— DR. JOYCE FINCH JOHNSON

Cynthia Maria Flint, C'81, recalled: "Some Friday evenings when Dr. Johnson would play, I'd be so tired after a week of science studies that I'd lay down in the pew and rest as she played sacred music. It revived my spirit and soul."

That sanctuary was intentional. Johnson created the weekly Quiet Hour program to provide students "the opportunity to have a unique, personal religious experience wherein, at the close of the day or week, they could sit quietly, meditate, reflect, pray, be inspired, uplifted and educated."

The music was only part of her ministry. "During some organ practicing sessions, if a student came quietly into the sanctuary and appeared to have an emotional problem, I knew intuitively right away, and would stop my work and immediately seek to console, counsel, and assist her," Johnson explained.

Johnson's credentials are impeccable — she is a Steinway Artist who debuted with Robert Shaw and the Atlanta

Symphony Orchestra. When Shaw asked what she had “on the back burner,” she boldly replied “John La Montaine’s Piano Concerto” for which she hadn’t even seen the score. In total, she performed the piano concertos six other times with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra. Then there is the story of her attending Mass at the Basilique Saint-Sernin in Toulouse, France, where the organist asked if she’d like to improvise the offertory. She answered “quietly” with a yes — and delivered.

Most people build a career by moving up and out. Johnson built hers by staying put and going deeper. What Johnson means to Spelman goes far beyond her resume. “I want to know how she never lost her cool in that place! I admire her loyalty and longevity. Doing one thing in the same place for over 50 years is impressive and rare,” marveled Pamela George.

“My endurance or longevity at Spelman is attributed to my love for the College and its mission, and my belief in its ideals and values,” Johnson said. “It is an institution that has actively pursued excellence ‘at any cost.’”

Her own longevity stems from viewing her work as a calling requiring “a passion for what you do; competency to support that passion; a purpose for your life, and the important purpose of serving others; the support of family whether institutional, biological, nuclear, extended or organizational.” She credits visionary presidential leadership and devoted alumnae for Spelman’s endurance, but most importantly, she adds “staying in a mode of prayer.”

Johnson took her position in 1955, the same year as Emmett Till’s murder and the Montgomery Bus Boycott. “Innumerable performance opportunities (even competitions) simply were not offered to people of color,” she noted. Yet she never viewed her work as political activism.

“Claiming space as a Black woman in classical music was never a political act or means of political expression for me,” Johnson explained. “Neither was it a matter of wanting to prove the capability of a Black woman to achieve in classical music.”

“By choice, it was a matter of following my early-discovered passion,” she said, often referencing Robert Frost’s poem about taking “the road less traveled.”

Instead of confrontation, she believed musicians “do civil rights differently — by our interactions and collaborations with people, as well as through the beauty of spirit that we share through our music.”

As a Black woman, Johnson learned to be “multi-dimensional without apology” — professor, administrator, concert pianist, organist, chamber music collaborator, accompanist, workshop presenter, while managing family and civic engagement.

Her dream? A vibrant music program where hundreds of students — not just music majors — participate in ensembles and take private lessons. To this end, she created “Pipe Organ Encounters,” where elementary students traveled to Sisters Chapel for mini recitals. “It was a joy for them and a joy for me,” she said. “In many public schools, music courses have been taken out of the curriculum. When STEM came in, the arts were abandoned,” she said. Yet she remains hopeful.

Johnson quotes Philippians 2:4: “Each of us should look not only to our own interests, but also to the interests of others.”

What she built — excellence as expectation, classical music as inheritance, showing up as sacred practice, creating space where young women can find peace — is for us.

Pioneering Technology and Digital Transformation with Visionary Impact

BY BRITTANY DES VIGNES

If you've recently applied for a job, requested time off or experienced seamless workplace technology, chances are you've interacted with systems shaped by the leadership of Rani Johnson, C'97, chief information officer at Workday. But for Johnson, technology has never been just about systems — it's about people. Her mission is to ensure equitable access to innovation, expand opportunity for underrepresented communities, and build technology rooted in empathy and inclusion.

A self-described “natural-born engineer,” Johnson's love of building began early. She grew up in Clear Lake, Texas, just outside Houston, with NASA quite literally in her backyard. Surrounded by Black excellence in STEM, from astronauts like Dr. Mae Jemison to scientists shaping the future, possibility felt tangible. Still, her greatest role models were at home. Both of her parents earned graduate degrees at a time when that achievement was rare for Black families, and they nurtured her curiosity in imaginative ways. Toys came unassembled. A birthday bike arrived in pieces. She loved every minute of figuring things out.

By age seven, Johnson's father gave her a Radio Shack TRS-80 computer and began teaching her to code. Her mother took her to adult computer science night classes while she was still in elementary school. Those early experiences planted seeds that would later flourish at Spelman College, where she pursued dual degrees in general and electrical engineering at Spelman and Georgia Tech as a NASA Scholar.

Like so many alumnae, Johnson credits Spelman with transforming her life. On campus, she found not only academic rigor but a lifelong sisterhood among fellow scholars and mentors who helped shape her sense of purpose. During her time at Spelman, the College's leadership reflected both visionary excellence and a deep commitment to service. Under President Dr. Johnnetta Betsch Cole's historic leadership, students were challenged to see their education as preparation for global impact.

Johnson was especially influenced by Dr. Etta Zuber Falconer, who oversaw the Spelman–NASA Women in Science & Engineering Program and exemplified a strong sense of responsibility to the community. Dr. Falconer's emphasis on servant leadership left a lasting imprint on her understanding of what it truly means to lead not from a place of status, but from a place of responsibility to others. Her mentorship helped guide Johnson's decision to study computer science at a time when the field's career paths were still emerging.

As a NASA Scholar, Johnson was part of a cohort chosen not only for academic excellence but for their commitment to giving back. She embraced that charge fully, recognizing both the privilege and responsibility of the opportunity. Encouraged by faculty who saw her talent and heart for service, she committed to a path that would merge technology with access and advocacy, determined not just to succeed herself, but to ensure others could follow.

Though she began in electrical engineering, Johnson noticed that traditional engineering spaces often prioritized prestige over inclusion. She made a bold pivot into information technology, recognizing it as a field with fewer barriers and greater opportunity to open doors for others. That decision became a defining one. Throughout her career, she has intentionally created pathways for women, people of color, graduates of lesser-known institutions, and talented individuals without traditional credentials.

Today at Workday, she leads global technology strategy with equity as a cornerstone. She believes technology must serve everyone and that responsible innovation means preventing harm, bias and exclusion before they happen. In her world, equitable access is not an initiative—it's an obligation.

Still, no matter how far her work reaches, Johnson's foundation remains rooted in Spelman. She encourages students and young professionals to lean into community the way she did, reminding them that support, sisterhood and shared purpose are catalysts for courage. She sees this moment, especially with the rise of AI, as a powerful opportunity for women to step forward, shape the future and claim space in rooms where decisions are made.

Johnson knows the journey isn't easy. Yet she embodies the spirit sung in the Spelman hymn: to be a "beacon of heavenly light, undaunted by the fight." And as Candace Crowl, C'2005, said, "When a Spelman woman walks through a room, the room will know it has been walked through." Rani Johnson walks through rooms and through industries carrying Spelman with her. And because of that, the future of technology is more equitable, more human and more hopeful.

AAP President-Elect 'Undaunted' In Fighting For Children's Health And Safety

BY ALLISON JOYNER

For Dr. Terri McFadden, C'81, leading a group of pediatricians at a time when the federal government objects to a lot of what they are telling their patients is something she takes seriously.

Dr. McFadden, M.D., M.P.H., who is a professor of pediatrics at Emory University School of Medicine and a general pediatrician at Children's Healthcare of Atlanta, was recently elected president-elect of the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP). She and AAP's over 67,000 members are committed to the optimal physical, mental, and social health and well-being for all infants, children, adolescents and young adults. The nonprofit has a proven record of standing on the right side of history when supporting children, families and pediatric clinicians.

"We find ourselves as an organization, pushing back quite a bit on policies that are harmful to children and families," McFadden said. "So, it is an everyday fight to make sure that children and their families get what they need to be successful." AAP is also committed to using policy, advocacy and education to encourage inclusivity and cultural effectiveness for all.

When she becomes president of the AAP in 2027, she will be the organization's second African American doctor to take this role in its 95-year history. As difficult as it sounds, McFadden knows she can lead the AAP through its tumultuous times because of the leadership she learned at Spelman College.

"At Spelman College, you feel as if you can do anything," McFadden said. "There is no door that can't be opened. There is no position that you are not qualified for. You are surrounded by excellence every day, and in return, you feel excellent. You have the abilities, the skills, to really do whatever it is you feel called to do."

Hailing from a small town in South Carolina, McFadden told the Messenger that she had everything she needed to be successful and was fortunate to have grown up in a household

"THERE IS NO DOOR THAT CAN'T BE OPENED. THERE IS NO POSITION THAT YOU ARE NOT QUALIFIED FOR. YOU ARE SURROUNDED BY EXCELLENCE EVERY DAY, AND IN RETURN, YOU FEEL EXCELLENT. YOU HAVE THE ABILITIES, THE SKILLS, TO REALLY DO WHATEVER IT IS YOU FEEL CALLED TO DO."

where her parents valued her and made her feel special, as if the world were her oyster. She always knew she wanted to be a doctor, especially a pediatrician. Even though her childhood doctor didn't look like her, she knew she could become one herself. When the time came to select a school to attend, McFadden's Ivy League aspirations were realigned by her mother to a college in Atlanta. She trusted her mom's intuition and applied to Spelman without ever setting foot on campus.

"And so off I went and never looked back. Never regretted it," McFadden said. "[Spelman] was the best decision I could have made. Best four years of my life." Even when she was campaigning for president, she gave a special nod to her alma mater to prove that she would contest for the AAP during an election debate.

“I mentioned that I was ‘undaunted to fight,’” McFadden said. “And I think there were a handful of Spelmanites in the audience who may have gotten it, but that’s the legacy of Spelman women. We are undaunted by the fight.” She added that legacy is about what someone does that endures long after they are gone.

“You probably heard the story of the man who was planting a tree, and somebody says, ‘Why are you planting a tree you will never see?’” McFadden said. “And he says, ‘I am planting it for others.’”

She said it’s all about creating a better life for the future, and being able to say to our own children and grandchildren when they say, ‘What did you do when these injustices occurred, when you saw social inequality and social inequities? What did you do about it?’

She thinks we all have to answer those questions for the next generation and others for generations to come.

To her, no matter what the discipline is, she thinks that Spelmanites are making sure that they are improving society today, not just for themselves, and not for their families, but for their communities and for the people that come behind them.

McFadden will have to continue to be undaunted as she pushes back against the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services’ decision to ignore evidence and the science known to be true for decades. These include immunizations, which have caused the infant mortality rate to plummet over the last 100 years. She knows it will be a challenge, but if she and the AAP keep children as their North Star, they will continue to help them reach their optimal potential.

From Spelman to City Hall: A Leadership Journey Rooted in Service

BY BRANDI WORLEY

When Ciara Smith-Roston, C'2020, was sworn in as the youngest and first African American mayor of Anniston, Alabama, in May 2025, her historic victory represented more than a milestone—it signaled a future-ready model of leadership rooted in service, vision and community impact.

A proud Spelman College alumna with a degree in political science, Smith-Roston embodies the College's enduring commitment to cultivating civic leaders who bridge tradition and progress while creating pathways for communities to thrive.

"I grew up seeing both the challenges and the resilience of Anniston, which shaped my belief that leadership should be rooted in service. Mentors, community leaders and women who looked like me consistently affirmed that my voice mattered," Smith-Roston said. "My grandmother, Gertrude Nettles, was heavily involved in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), and I was primarily raised by her, so I remember as a little girl sitting in those meetings at 17th Street Baptist Church, soaking in all the information, not knowing how it would shape my future."

That sense of responsibility was sharpened at Spelman, where academic rigor and leadership development expanded Smith-Roston's sense of possibility. She gained hands-on experience in public service, canvassing for then-Atlanta Mayor Keisha Lance Bottoms and interning in the office of Georgia's 4th Congressional District Congressman Hank Johnson. She also served as secretary of Student Affairs in the Student Government Association. These experiences gave her early insight into governance, broadened her perspective and gave her confidence.

"Spelman taught me that leadership is not about position but about responsibility. I learned to lead with integrity, purpose and to center the needs of the community in every decision," Smith-Roston said. "That foundation influences how I govern by listening first and acting with intention. I know for a fact Spelman gave me the confidence I needed to come home and be the change."

Smith-Roston went on to earn her Master of Public Administration at Jacksonville State University and is currently pursuing a law degree at Faulkner University, Thomas Goode Jones School of Law. In November 2020, she was elected as the youngest-ever council member and vice mayor of Anniston.

When Smith-Roston ran for mayor, her vision centered on inclusive growth and opportunity. "My vision was to build a more inclusive, forward-thinking Anniston where opportunity is accessible to all." Once sworn into office, that vision has evolved through collaboration and a deeper understanding of the process. "Growth is not an overnight process, especially when there are so many factors to be considered. Leadership requires difficult decision-making, and sometimes it's not popular. I focus on what is right. What is both ethically and legally sound, and always with the best interests of the people in mind,” Smith-Roston said. “I hope to make the load lighter for those who come after me.”

Central to Smith-Roston’s approach is engaging the next generation, particularly young Black women. “I lead by example and make myself visible and accessible,” she said. She is deeply involved in Anniston’s local schools and believes that representation matters. “The sky is not the limit. When you reach the sky, go further.”

Smith-Roston’s leadership also reflects a thoughtful balance between honoring history and embracing innovation. “By acknowledging the past honestly while refusing to be limited by it,” she explained. “Understanding and knowing our history only helps me to create a more viable future.”

That philosophy informs initiatives like “Mayor’s Moment,” a platform designed to foster transparency and two-way communication. “One of the greatest challenges many people face is feeling unheard or disconnected from local government, and ‘Mayor’s Moment’ was designed to bridge that gap,” she said.

For Smith-Roston, future-ready leadership is rooted in a growth mindset. “It means being adaptable, inclusive and proactive,” Smith-Roston said, emphasizing people over politics. Her focus on entrepreneurship and economic development reflects that mindset. “I always keep myself in check with this one question: ‘How can I balance growth while also preserving Anniston’s identity?’ It is also about not allowing the trends of politics to overshadow the real work that needs to be done. My focus is on ensuring that my leadership remains people-centered and grounded in service, rather than being overwhelmed by partisan politics that often sensationalize issues.”

Looking ahead, Smith-Roston hopes her legacy will be defined by lasting progress and expanded opportunity. “Impact starts with you,” she said.

A Family Legacy of Gratitude, A Future for the Next Generation of Spelman Women

BY CIERRA CHULY BOYD

FOR THE CRAWFORD FAMILY, giving is not a moment—it is a tradition.

Long before their recent $2 million gift to Spelman College and Morehouse College, philanthropy was modeled as a way of life. It began with their grandmother, Ruth, who believed, well into her 100s, in giving back to the institutions that made opportunity possible. It continued through their parents, who instilled in their children a deep appreciation for education, discipline and community.

That legacy lives on today through alumna Dr. Christine Ruth Crawford, C'94, and her brothers, Dr. George Crawford and Dr. Marcus Crawford, who graduated from Morehouse College in 1996 and 1998, respectively—each shaped by the enduring influence of Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs).

Their connection to Spelman and Morehouse is both personal and generational. Since their father's graduation from Morehouse in 1962, he has never missed a Homecoming – establishing a tradition that brought the family back to campus year after year and kept them deeply involved in the community. Over time, those experiences helped shape not only their academic paths, but their understanding of what it means to give back.

“HBCUs have always been part of our lives,” said Dr. Christine Crawford. “We grew up knowing that you give back to the places that have allowed you to grow and to prosper.”

That belief guided their decision to give collectively—honoring both institutions that helped shape their lives, making a significant investment in Spelman's future. More than $1 million of their gift supports Spelman Strong, the College's unrestricted annual fund, as well as its general endowment.

Their choice to give unrestricted is intentional. It reflects a deep trust in Spelman's leadership and a recognition that the needs of students—and the institution—continue to evolve.

“Departments change, trends change, and students' needs change,” Crawford shared. “It was important to us for the institutions to be able to use [the funds] as they saw best—because that kind of support can be life-changing.”

Unrestricted support allows Spelman to respond in real time—helping students persist through unexpected financial challenges, strengthening academic programs, and advancing strategic priorities. At the same time, endowment support ensures that future generations of Spelman women will benefit from the same excellence, opportunity, and community that have defined the College for more than a century.

For Dr. Crawford, that foundation is deeply personal. She credits Spelman's faculty, mentorship and academic rigor with shaping her path—instilling confidence, ambition and a belief in what is possible.

She describes Spelman as a place where excellence is expected, support is unwavering, and community extends far beyond the classroom.

That enduring impact is precisely what the Crawford family sought to strengthen through their investment. Their gift comes at a pivotal moment, as the College advances the Spelman Forward capital campaign—an effort to expand access, strengthen academic excellence and prepare future generations of Spelman women to lead.

For the Crawfords, their gift is ultimately an expression of gratitude and a responsibility to those who will follow.

“It still feels small, because for all that we have gotten as a family, it doesn't feel like we could ever completely give back what we've been given,” Crawford said. “We feel so much pride and love for our schools because of how much they gave us. That is priceless. Whatever we can do to provide that for the next generation and generations to come is the responsibility of us all.”

Stories like the Crawfords' are a powerful reminder that when one generation invests in the next, the impact extends far beyond a single gift. Explore how you can help expand access and opportunity for Spelman women through Spelman Forward.

Donor Roll 2024

Fiscal Year 2024 (July 1, 2023, through June 30, 2024) was a transformational fundraising year for Spelman College, with more than $132.2 million raised. We are grateful for the generosity of each of our contributors, including several new leadership gifts and commitments totaling $117 million. These gifts reflect the generosity of our donors, whose support advances Spelman's strategic plan to evolve the curriculum, expand student access, modernize and expand infrastructure, and invest in people, processes, and culture—preparing the next generation of leaders for an ever-changing world. Together, these priorities are shaping the future of Spelman College and the students we serve. Please join us in thanking the FY2024 Leadership Donors.

Donor Roll 2025

Fiscal Year 2025 (July 1, 2024, through June 30, 2025) was a momentum-building fundraising year for Spelman College, with more than $28 million raised. We are grateful for the generosity of each of our contributors, including several new leadership gifts and commitments totaling $12.6 million, helping to position the College for its next defining chapter. Their support, along with yours, advances Spelman's strategic plan to evolve the curriculum, expand student access, modernize, and expand infrastructure, and invest in people, processes, and culture—preparing the next generation of leaders to thrive in a world of increasing opportunity and challenge. Together, these priorities are building the foundation for a future-ready Spelman College and the students we serve. Please join us in thanking the FY2025 Leadership Donors.

From Special Ed. to Spelman: Against All Odds

"From Special Ed. to Spelman," readers embark on a remarkable journey of faith and resilience with a courageous young lady who defies all odds. This inspiring memoir follows her transformation from being labeled as learning disabled to becoming a beacon of hope for others facing similar challenges. With unwavering faith, dedication, determination and discipline, she harnesses her willpower to overcome the obstacles that society has placed upon her.

Through her personal story, she unveils the secrets to removing the labels that society imposes upon us.

This book is not just a memoir, but a guide filled with pearls of wisdom and practical tools for students and professionals with disabilities.

A Spinner's Christmas

A Spinner's Christmas, a book that explores Christmas from the perspective of a Daddy Longlegs spider and a disgruntled London Charwoman.

A London hat store's closing at Christmas causes angst for everyone who works there — humans and spiders.

Welcome to the world of spiders as they face off against murderous humans on a Christmas cleaning jag.

Miracles abound in this most-unique story of roles, identity and workplace trials in two worlds.

Psychology of Black Womanhood

Psychology of Black Womanhood is the first textbook to provide an authoritative, jargon-free, affordable, and holistic exploration of the sociohistorical and psychological experiences of Black girls and women in the United States, while discussing the intersection of their identities. The authors include research on young, middle-aged, and maturing women; LGBTQ+ women and non-binary individuals; women with disabilities; and women across social classes. Psychology of Black Womanhood speaks to the psychological study of experiences of girls and women of African descent in the United States and their experiences in the context of identity development, education, religion, body image, physical and mental health, racialized gendered violence, sex and sexuality, work, relationships, aging, motherhood and activism. This textbook has implications for practice in counseling, social work, health care, education, advocacy and policy.

Queen Mother Black Nationalism, Reparations and the Untold Story of Audley Moore

In the world of Black radical politics, the name Audley Moore commands unquestioned respect. Across the nine decades of her life, Queen Mother Moore distinguished herself as a leading progenitor of Black Nationalism, the founder of the modern reparations movement, and, from her Philadelphia and Harlem homes, a mentor to some of America's most influential Black activists.

And yet, she is far less remembered than many of her peers and protégés—Marcus Garvey, Malcolm X, and Muhammad Ahmad, to name just a few—and the ephemera of her life are either lost or plundered. In Queen Mother, celebrated writer and historian Ashley D. Farmer restores Moore's faded portrait, delivering the first ever definitive account of her life and enduring legacy.

Deeply researched and richly detailed, Queen Mother is more than just the biography of an American icon. It's a narrative history of 20th-century Black radicalism, told through the lens of the woman whose grit and determination sustained the movement.

You Are Before the World: Lessons on Doing Good without Being Undone

When giving is your calling, when do you not answer the phone?

On the morning of November 6, 2024, Tara Jaye Frank found herself on her literal knees, grieving not only the state of a nation but the state of her soul. A helper by nature, a builder by calling and a survivor of trauma, heartbreak and the relentless grind of leadership, Tara reached a breaking point. And from that brokenness came a holy reimagining.

You Are Before the World is not a book about burnout. It's a book about becoming. Soothing your soul and strengthening your spine, it welcomes you into the sacred space between leaving it all on the field and opting out entirely. Tara shares her own story of personal reckoning and renewal, offering hard-won wisdom anchored in spiritual clarity.

Me and Me Too! Searching for Oneself A Children's Book

This children's book was written for two primary reasons: Firstly, to inspire parents to begin helping their children develop their own self-identity and the capacity to express verbally their unique feelings and thoughts at an early age. Secondly, to create two children figures that all children could somehow personally relate to in a reflective and inspirational way regarding their own self-development.

Kin: A Novel

OPRAH'S BOOK CLUB PICK

A magnificent new novel from the bestselling, award-winning author of An American Marriage—Tayari Jones.

Vernice and Annie, two motherless daughters raised in Honeysuckle, Louisiana, have been best friends and neighbors since earliest childhood but are fated to live starkly different lives. Raised by a fierce aunt determined to give her a stable home in the wake of her mother's death, Vernice leaves

Honeysuckle at eighteen for Spelman College, where she joins a sisterhood of powerfully connected Black women and discovers a world of affluence, manners, aspiration and inequality. Annie, abandoned by her mother as a child and fixated on the idea of finding her and filling the bottomless hole left by her absence, sets off on a journey that will take her into a world of peril and adversity, as well as love and adventure, culminating in a battle for her life.

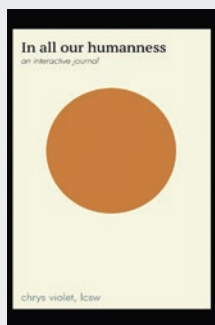

A novel about mothers and daughters, friendship and sisterhood, and the complexities of being a woman in the American South, Kin is an exuberant, emotionally rich, unforgettable work from one of the brightest and most irresistible voices in contemporary fiction.

Do You Know? A Survey of the Black Experience in America

Do You Know? A Survey of the Black Experience in America uses a non-traditional, non-narrative style to tell the history of Black people before and after the birth of the United States of America. The familiar multiple choice and true/false question formats take the reader on an intriguing journey, discovering the experiences of one of America's oldest communities.

It is designed for individual and team reading, study and discussion. Many questions are suitable for gaming platforms, such as Kahoot!, and will promote learning and healthy competition in a variety of group settings.

Do You Know? preserves, protects and passes on the story of a resilient people who persevered against mind numbing, soul bruising odds, and became a model for other people.

M. Akua McDaniel, Ph.D., C'69

A Dream Deferred: the Art and Activism of Edwin A. Harleston

The first full-length biography of one of South Carolina's most significant African American visual artists.

Excluded from the Charleston Renaissance because of his race and pushed to the edges of the Harlem Renaissance by geography and circumstance, Edwin Augustus Harleston was an artist caught between worlds.

In A Dream Deferred, Akua McDaniel offers the first comprehensive biography of Harleston. McDaniel considers not only his efforts to redefine the image of Black life in American visual culture, but she also examines Harleston's life as a social and political activist, including his role in founding the first NAACP chapter in South Carolina. McDaniel offers a full portrait of Harleston's life and career, one that had an outsized impact on the American art world, and beyond.

Modern-Day Strategies for Community Engagement: How to Effectively Build Bridges Between People and the Bottom Line

Government agencies, corporations, and organizations have often experienced difficulty when trying to connect with the people who are most impacted by their projects. It is necessary to leave the office, get from behind the computer, and interact with people face-to-face. There is an art and process to engaging with your community—a group of people with shared commonality. This book serves as a primer for how the public and private sectors can interact with their customers and constituents in an authentic, equitable and intentional manner.

In Modern-Day Strategies for Community Engagement: How to Effectively Build Bridges Between People and the Bottom Line, MaKara Rumley takes the reader through the process of effective community engagement. With Modern-Day Strategies for Community Engagement as a guide, the reader will engender confidence in their ability to implement measurable strategies and communicate using plain language that will resonate with their prioritized audience.

What We've Become

Black survival requires intentional practices of intimacy. Against a backdrop of oppression mundane practices of it become radical acts of resistance. Causally read, this collection is about romantic love; more broadly it examines how we courageously decide our days. Defined as mutual trust, care and acceptance intimacy expects the person practicing it to be vulnerable, and vulnerability, is inherently unsafe for oppressed people which challenges our primal survival instinct toward mutuality. This is the paradox that motivates these poems where subjects decide to endure in-or evade-intimacy. The choices determine not just who we do or don't spend our lives with but the courage with which we spend them.

Why Did You Say That? Five Things Managers Say That Stifle Creativity

Have you ever inquired about someone's job or a position like it, and your manager said, "I'm not leaving, you'll have to go elsewhere?" They assume you want their position. But no, you want one like it and want to be prepared to get it the next time one circles around.

This book focuses on five things managers say that make people feel unheard, unseen and less valued. The sayings can lead you to question your abilities and worth. They can zap the productivity, creative and innovative juices which may keep you stagnant. The sayings can impact the company, or the organization's bottom line.

During stressful and disappointing times, conversations can be imperfect. By sharing some practical details, examples, and differences on managers and leaders, you'll learn how what they say can boost morale or derail confidence, and how what you say can move mountains, empower others, and bridge gaps in communication.

Nestled within the Team & Internal Initiatives category, this honor celebrates her visionary leadership at the #BlackTechFutures Research Institute, where she champions digital equity and the creation of ethical tech ecosystems for Black communities nationwide.

Erica Nicole Wright, C'94, who serves as the assistant general counsel for the University of the District of Columbia, was selected to be in the initial cohort of participants for a yearlong program with the National Association of College and University (NACUA)'s Campus Counsel Leadership Intensive (CCLI). CCLI is tailored exclusively for mid-career higher education attorneys who are seeking to create a bigger impact as leaders at their institutions.

ITEEA has announced its 2026 Leaders to Watch, recognizing outstanding educators who have made significant, long-term contributions to technology and engineering education through teaching, research, and presentations. Andrea D. Wright, C'97, was among the honorees. She was also mentioned in the STEAM Makers 2nd Edition book that offers innovative ways to integrate creativity, technology, and hands-on problem-solving into daily practice for grade levels PreK-5.

LaTonya Wright, C'2001, was named an APS District Teacher of the Year Finalist (2025-2026), APS High School Teacher of the Year (2025-2026), and Booker T. Washington High School Teacher of the Year (2025-2026). These honors recognize her exceptional instructional leadership, dedication to student achievement, and sustained commitment to excellence in education.

Ambassador Ruth A. Davis, C'65

Spelman College honors the life and legacy of Ambassador Ruth A. Davis, C'65, the first African-American woman to serve as director general of the Foreign Service, Ambassador Davis' journey was deeply influenced by her experiences at Spelman College. Reflecting on her time at Spelman, Ambassador Davis remarked:

"Taking French at Spelman helped me in my first assignment overseas. Perhaps the most exciting career to which one could aspire, the Foreign Service gives one the opportunity to represent America abroad and offers exposure to different cultures and languages."

Born in Phoenix, Arizona, and raised in Atlanta, Georgia, Ambassador Davis graduated magna cum laude from Spelman in 1966 with a degree in sociology. As a Merrill Scholar, she spent 15 months studying and traveling throughout Europe and the Middle East, an experience that ignited her passion for international affairs. She later earned a master's degree from the University of California, Berkeley's School of Social Work.

In 1969, Ambassador Davis joined the U.S. Foreign Service.

As Consul General in Barcelona, Spain (1987–1991), she played a key role in organizing the 1992 Olympic Games and supported Atlanta's successful bid for the 1996 Olympics.

In 1997, Ambassador Davis became the first African-American director of the Foreign Service Institute, where she revolutionized diplomatic training by emphasizing leadership development and expanding global readiness programs.

Over the course of her career, Ambassador Davis received numerous honors, including:

- The Presidential Distinguished Service Award (twice)
- The Secretary of State's Distinguished Service Award
- The Arnold L. Raphel Memorial Award for mentoring
- The Lifetime Contributions to American Diplomacy Award from the American Foreign Service Association

She also received honorary degrees from Spelman College and Middlebury College. In recognition of her lasting impact, a conference room at the Foreign Service Institute in Arlington, Virginia, bears her name.

Ambassador Davis dedicated her life to diplomacy, mentorship and public service. She opened doors for countless diplomats, particularly women and people of color and helped redefine what leadership in American foreign policy could look like.

Bernice Johnson Reagon, C'70

Singer, band leader, and social activist best known for performing with two influential singing ensembles: the 1960s protest group The Freedom Singers and the Grammy-nominated a cappella troupe Sweet Honey in the Rock passed away on July 16, 2024.

Raised in the segregated South, she went to college at age 16, studying music at Albany State in Georgia. But she didn't just embrace music while at the school; she also embraced activism, becoming involved with the local chapters of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC).

While at Albany State, Reagon joined The Freedom Singers. Organized by the SNCC, they were a singing group that traveled and performed nationally, singing protest anthems that helped put the feelings of the era's civil rights movement into compelling songcraft. Their best-known work is a memorable rendition of the traditional hymn, "We Shall Not Be Moved." However, when Reagon was arrested for taking part in civil rights protests, she was expelled from school.

Reagon later finished her undergrad studies at Spelman College and earned her PhD from Howard University, then went into academics. She became cultural historian in music history at the Smithsonian Institution in 1974, then curator of music history for the National Museum of American History. Around this time, she also formed Sweet Honey in the Rock, an all-woman, all-Black a cappella chorale that sings songs focused on African American history, spirituality, motherhood and social issues. The group, which was based in Washington, D.C., has had a rotating slate of members over the years and was twice nominated for a Grammy Award.

Reagon was presented with the Candace Award from the National Coalition of 100 Black Women, the Charles Frankel Prize, a Heinz Award in the Arts and Humanities, and the First National Leeway Laurel Award at the Leeway Foundation in Philadelphia, among the many honors given to her.

Tina McElroy Ansa, C'71

The Spelman College community around the world mourns the loss of an indomitable spirit, a beloved alumna whose life was a testament to the power of storytelling. Tina McElroy Ansa, C'71, who passed away on September 10, 2024, was more than a novelist, publisher, filmmaker, teacher and journalist — she was a cultural icon who wove the rich tapestry of the Southern experience into the fabric of American literature. She was 74.

Raised in Macon, Georgia and earning her degree from Spelman College, Tina McElroy Ansa got her start in the literary world as a copyeditor for the Atlanta Constitution. Her first novel, 1989's "Baby of the Family," was named a New York Times Notable Book of the Year, and in 2001 it was included as one of the "25 Books Every Georgian Should Read" by the Georgia Center for the Book. The novel was the first in a series of stories set in the fictional town of Mulberry, Georgia.

Ansa's early success continued with her second novel, "Ugly Ways," which earned an NAACP Image Award nomination and also made the "25 Books Every Georgian Should Read" list. Its sequel, 2008's "Taking After Mudear," earned the same honor. Other novels include "The Hand I Fan With" and "You Know Better."

In 2007, Ansa founded DownSouth Press, an independent publishing company focused on spotlighting great literature by Black authors. She was also the founder of the Sea Island Writers Retreats on Sapelo Island, Georgia, and, along with Dazon Diallo, created the South African African-American SisterLove Sisters Sharing (SAAASSS) book program, which shares books by African-American authors with readers in South Africa.

She was a writer-in-residence at Spelman College and has been a lecturer at the Author's Series of the Smithsonian's African-American Center, the PEN/Faulkner Reading Series, the PEN American Center in New York City, and many others. In addition to her novels, Ansa wrote works that have appeared in The Los Angeles Times, The Atlanta Constitution, the Chicago Sun-Times and many others.

Gwendolyn Harris Middlebrooks, Ph.D., C'61

Dr. Gwendolyn Harris Middlebrooks, 84, civil rights activist and beloved educator, passed away on February 7, 2024.

Born on November 1, 1939, in Chattanooga, Tennessee, as the third child of the union of Mrs. Lillie Mae Hughley Harris and Mr. Edward Harris, Dr. Middlebrooks moved to Atlanta at a young age and became deeply involved in the fight for equality, participating in key actions that led to the desegregation of the city. Specifically, she was among the students of the Atlanta Student Movement who launched coordinated sit-ins and boycotts of Rich's Department Store (later acquired by Macy's) in downtown Atlanta beginning in 1960, helping lead to the dismantling of segregation at Atlanta's largest and most influential department store at that time.

A Spelman College alumna, she later returned there to her alma mater to embark on a distinguished 42-year career, shaping future leaders, and retiring as professor emerita. Dr. Middlebrooks earned her Ph.D. in Educational Leadership from Georgia State University and received numerous accolades for her contributions to civil rights and education.

She is survived by her husband of 63 years, Mr. James Thomas Middlebrooks; her children, Dr. Jayne Thenise Morgan (Joe), Dr. Valerie Leah Johnson (Michael) and Mr. Kevin James Middlebrooks (Bijou); her sister, Yvonne Harris and her grandchildren. She is preceded in death by her 2 brothers, Mr. Alfred

Harris and Mr. Edward Harris (Peaky).

Dr. Middlebrooks' funeral service was held at Ebenezer Baptist Church on Tuesday, February 13, 2024.
