IN MEMORIAM

We honor our Spelman sisters. If you receive notice of the death of a Spelman sister, please contact the Office of Alumnae Engagement at 404-270-5048 or Linda Patton, associate director of alumnae engagement, at lpatton@spelman.edu. For verification purposes, please include a printed program, newspaper acknowledgment or electronic link with your submission.

CLARIFICATION

On page 15 of the fall 2019 Spelman Messenger, we featured Dr. Juvonda Hodge, C'92. In the article, Hodge questioned if there were other surgeons prior to her class year. Well, there are.

In addition to Dr. Ruby Skinner, C'89, who was mentioned in the article, there was her classmate, Dr. Anita T. Johnson. Johnson is director, Breast Surgical Oncology, Cancer Treatment Centers of America-Atlanta, and adjunct clinical professor of surgery for Morehouse School of Medicine.

Also, before the 1989 graduates, there was Dr. Huelidine Webb, C'73, who became an orthopedic surgeon.

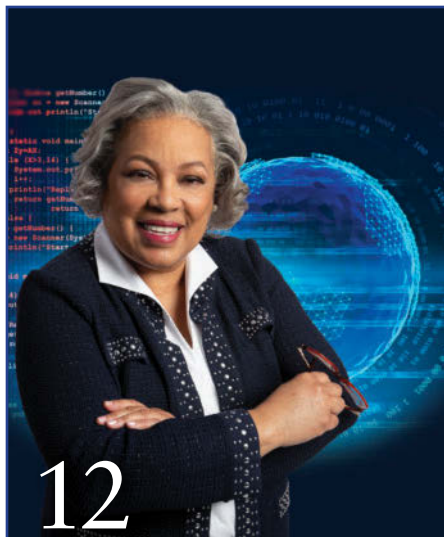

CREDO

Founded in 1885, the Spelman Messenger is the alumnae magazine of Spelman College and is committed to educating, serving and empowering Black women. The content of the Messenger is designed to share news and events about the College and alumnae, as well as discuss Spelman's leadership role in addressing a wide range of issues relevant to our community.

A Message of Hope

When I first set out to write this column, it was an opportunity to thank you, our Spelman alumnae, for your unwavering support. At the same time, I was eager to share news of the continuing success of our extraordinary Spelman students and the dedicated faculty and staff responsible for their outstanding education. I was looking forward to letting you know that the 2019 U.S. News & World Report rankings continue to place Spelman College in the forefront of all liberal arts colleges – No. 6 among liberal arts colleges on social mobility and innovation – and still the No. 1 HBCU.

Because the Spelman community is especially excited about the launch of the Atlanta University Center's new Data Science Initiative, this issue of the Messenger celebrates that launch by featuring star alumna Daphne Smith, Ph.D., C'80, the first African American woman to earn a Ph.D. in mathematics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Dr. Smith is renowned as a healthcare data analyst, specializing in disease management. I am pleased to present our feature on such an accomplished career.

However, with the coronavirus outbreak, I decided to use my message to focus on how Spelman has responded to this health crisis and share with you why I am so hopeful.

Our first sign of the virus's impact showed up through our study abroad programs. Two dozen Spelmanites were studying during the spring semester in countries all over the globe: Japan, Italy, South Africa, Morocco, London and Brazil were just a few of the destinations. As the virus spread around the globe, it became apparent we needed to do everything possible to bring our students home safely. And we did. Through the tireless efforts of our provost, Sharon Davies, J.D., and vice provost for global education 'Dimeji Togunde, Ph.D., all of our students returned home safely.

Then, the virus arrived in Atlanta.

As spring break approached, it became clear that with the virus crossing the ocean and landing with such ferocity, housing students in residence halls was akin to having a cruise ship on campus. Large gatherings for classes, events or just casual socializing made "physical distancing" as a major preventive strategy a near impossibility.

Moving quickly, Spelman, along with its academic partners in the Atlanta University Center — Morehouse School of Medicine, Morehouse College and Clark Atlanta University — made several key decisions. We extended spring break for a week, and under the guidance of our vice president for student affairs, Darryl Hollman, Ph.D., moved students out of the residence halls and, through the office of provost Davies, transitioned 800 courses from in-person to online instruction. Our dean of Sisters Chapel, the Rev. Neichelle Guidry, Ph.D., established "For the Soul of Spelman," a virtual gathering to provide solace and spiritual community for our students during this time. Also, a number of faculty and staff set up virtual gathering spaces. Our vice president for institutional advancement, Jessie Brooks, and his team quickly set up an emergency fund for those students who would experience hardships as a result of the abrupt changes. Your generosity to that fund, my Sisters, has been overwhelming.

To protect the health and safety of faculty and staff, as well as students, our chief financial officer, Dawn Alston, and her team instituted a telecommuting policy that allows some employees to work remotely from home. Because we still have 65 students who remain on campus because they are not able to go home, the College retains on-campus staff essential for their health and safety, as well as the ongoing operations of the campus. Ms. Alston and her team have also expertly managed the finances of the College as the disruptions brought unexpected costs.

Our associate vice president for government relations and my chief of staff, Helga Greenfield, and Ms. Alston worked closely with our Georgia legislators and the United Negro College Fund during the spring break and beyond to assemble a financial assistance program for higher education with particular attention to HBCUs. Their good work has paid off. Though the federal assistance will not cover all of the additional costs incurred by the College, as a result of the health crisis, it will certainly go a long way toward mitigating the impact.

For our students, the abrupt move off campus was a major upheaval in their lives. To watch them pack up and leave was to witness young people in mourning. They are experiencing real loss. They are losing the enduring face-to-face relationships they have forged with friends, faculty and staff. They are losing the spellbinding spirit of spring at Spelman, a time that brings many of the ceremonies we hold dear: Founders Day, Class Day, the walk through the arch, baccalaureate, commencement and, of course for you, my Sisters, reunion. Our Office of Alumnae Engagement is working hard to have a virtual experience for Founders Day and replace many of our other ceremonies for later this year.

Despite the disruptions, I remain hopeful. In the past weeks, I have witnessed a community rally as I have never before seen. Faculty responded with energy and enthusiasm in shifting from in-person to online instruction. Some were completely new to online and participated in week-long training sessions. Students are working their way through initial barriers to adjust to a new learning format. Staff members are shifting roles to accommodate the new reality. The College has purchased laptops, tablets, new software, internet hot spots, cloud storage and additional capacity for our various online platforms. In the process, we are finding that we are re-writing the script for higher education every day with resilience, resolve and imagination.

That is why I am hopeful.

I am hopeful, because we have demonstrated we have resilience, resolve and imagination to re-envision ourselves. Spelman and every college and university in the country will be forever changed by this crisis and will need every bit of that imagination, as well as a spirit of innovation, to shape its future. What shape will higher education take? As of now, we don't know, but we do know that Spelman can rely on its deep reservoirs of faith and its capacity to remain, in the words of our hymn, "undaunted by the fight."

Keep the faith,

*Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D.

COLLEGE ORGANIST JOYCE JOHNSON IS A GIFT THAT KEEPS GIVING TO SPELMAN

BY ALICIA SANDS LURRY

Dressed in a long-sleeved, gray knit dress complemented by a silver necklace and matching earrings, a spry and cheerful Joyce Finch Johnson, D.Mus., sits as comfortably poised at the Holtkamp organ in Sisters Chapel as she would in the solitude of her own home.

For Johnson, Sisters Chapel is home. It's the home she's known since first arriving at Spelman College in 1953 to teach music theory and serve as faculty accompanist for the choral groups. After two years, she became the College organist, a role she still fulfills, and one that allows her to share her musical gifts and talent with the Spelman and Atlanta communities.

According to Johnson, "it's all in a day's work, but it does require lots of preparation.

"As the College organist, it has been my job to support both the chapel-related activities, including the chapel worship services, and the College-related events such as convocations, Founders Day, commencement, baccalaureate and any other services that occur in the chapel," says Johnson, whose warm, gracious and witty nature has made her a beloved member of the Spelman community. "It's just my job and one that I have enjoyed immensely with the hope that it has been appreciated through the years by this community and the wider Atlanta community."

For decades, Johnson has served as organist for the annual Spelman-Morehouse Christmas Carol Concert, where her performances are just as anticipated as those of the Spelman and Morehouse glee clubs. An accomplished, award-winning organist and concert pianist, she participated most recently in the 93rd Annual Spelman-Morehouse Christmas Carol concert in December.

The concert has vastly changed since its founding at Spelman in 1928 by the late Kemper Harreld. As late as 1953, the program was an intimate program featuring the Atlanta-Spelman-Morehouse Chorus and the glee clubs. The prelude was quiet and meditative, candelabras were lit, the choral groups were smaller, and Spelman students wore short white dresses.

As the groups grew in size, the stage was extended and risers became necessary. Candle-lighting became hazardous and was discontinued. The Spelman women began wearing long black choral gowns. Even the organ prelude changed, becoming more robust and exciting, rather than reflective and quiet.

In the early years, the chorus sang mostly spirituals and folk Christmas songs from other countries like Poland, Hungary, France and Spain. In the past 25 years or so, the concert's repertoire became more diverse and now includes anthems, spirituals, gospel music and even rap. Also, in the earlier concerts, only the organ and piano were used to accompany.

"I remember when the selection 'Betelehemu' was first introduced," Johnson recalls. "It was novel and people resented the use of African drums in the concert. Now, drums and a variety of instruments are used extensively to enhance the singing and make the program exciting."

In 1979, shortly after Morehouse built the Martin Luther King Jr. International Chapel that seated nearly 2,500, it was decided that two of the three performances should be there in order to accommodate more people.

"The crowds had become so large at Spelman, with people standing around the walls and other people not admitted, we took the opportunity to go to Morehouse for some performances," says Johnson.

As the choral programming continues to evolve, so does Johnson's organ repertoire. Each year, she takes the opportunity to learn new Christmas organ music to share with audiences. Preparation for the Christmas carol concert is intensive. In addition to spending many hours practicing the music, the larger challenge is that of programming the organs at Spelman and Morehouse — which she says are two totally different instruments. She decides on registrations (the colors), puts them into the computer-like mechanism to ensure the music is perfect, or “camera ready,” as she calls it.

Dr. Johnson recently received the American Guild of Organists's Edward A. Hansen Leadership Award for her long and distinguished career at Spelman, her devotion to the Guild, and for enriching the lives of others through teaching and performing.

For decades, Dr. Joyce Johnson has served as the Spelman College organist.

One year for the Christmas carol concert, Dr. Johnson also directed the glee club.

“My heart is warm and with deep appreciation for the College continuing to offer this quality music of various genres for the city of Atlanta and largely our African American community,” says Johnson, who recently received the American Guild of Organists’s Edward A. Hansen Leadership Award for her long and distinguished career at Spelman, her devotion to the Guild, and for enriching the lives of others through teaching and performing.

“The Christmas carol concert is a gift to our people. Families bring their children and their neighbors to start their Christmas season, so I’m happy that we’re able to give something meaningful and enriching to the community and that we can continue the tradition of excellent music here,” she says.

Carnella Stewart, C’69, and her classmate Carolyn Davenport, C’69, are among the droves of Atlantans who love the concert and have made it an annual tradition. Both agree that Johnson makes the program particularly special.

“Dr. Johnson does such a wonderful job performing, and the music is spiritually uplifting, which is always so important,” Stewart says. “The array of music is so powerful and interesting.”

“She’s amazing,” adds Davenport, who received organ lessons from Johnson and has attended the concert since 1975. “I’ve always regarded Dr. Johnson as a role model of excellence. She is so talented and skillful.”

As always, the 93rd Annual Spelman-Morehouse Christmas Carol Concert held from Dec. 6 - 8, 2019, was performed to a packed house at Spelman, Saturday, Dec. 7. In addition to the traditional favorites — including "Glory to God," "We Are Christmas" and "Betelehemu" — new songs to the repertoire included "Children, Go Where I Send Thee," "Ave Maria" and "Jesus, What a Wonderful Child."

A DREAM TO RETURN TO SUDAN AN ENTREPRENEUR EARNS STUDENT INTERNSHIP WITH BRIGHTHOUSE

BY RENITA MATHIS

In the dead of night, some 20 years ago, 4-year-old Julia Julima, her mother, father and year-old sister left war-torn Sudan to travel by boat up the Nile River into Egypt. It is a forever-memory etched in her mind.

“I remember being mesmerized because it was night, and there was fire and torches we used to walk to the boat,” says Julima, C’2022, an economics major. “I’ve never returned home since leaving, but my dream is to someday return and start my own company creating bedding using African fabrics.

“There’s a level of hope I want to be able to impart... to help my people and my country ... that I’m not able to do right now. I hope that in the next five years, I’m ready,” she says.

That purpose-centered vision is why Julima was selected from a pool of student applicants to receive a summer internship at BrightHouse, a global creative consultancy and a Boston Consulting Group company.

“As we recruit interns, we look for candidates who will enable a strong ‘value exchange’ during their time with us,” says Chip Gross, BrightHouse managing director, Atlanta. “Julia from the start had done her homework and came prepared to ask thoughtful questions about the consultancy and our work. At BrightHouse, we describe everyone within our ‘house’ as a thinker, and we expect all of our thinkers to engage and bring new ideas to the table. That’s exactly what Julia did and undoubtedly will continue to do once she joins us.”

A transfer student into the Pauline E. Drake Scholars Program, a curriculum that offers mature learners an opportunity to begin or complete their college studies, Julima, who is 25, came to know about Spelman at first from a rap song and then from a Morehouse College graduate while a student at San Diego Mesa College.

Through the United Nations High Commission for Refugees Program, which works to protect and assist refugees around the world, Julima and her family landed in San Diego — not in Australia or Amarillo, Texas, like her father was hoping — after living in Egypt for three years. In San Diego, Julima thrived, working several jobs and attending college.

Through her diverse job holdings, the erudite Julima realized she learned best working in the field and developed an acumen for numbers and business. After completing SDMC, she applied to one school — Spelman — and was accepted.

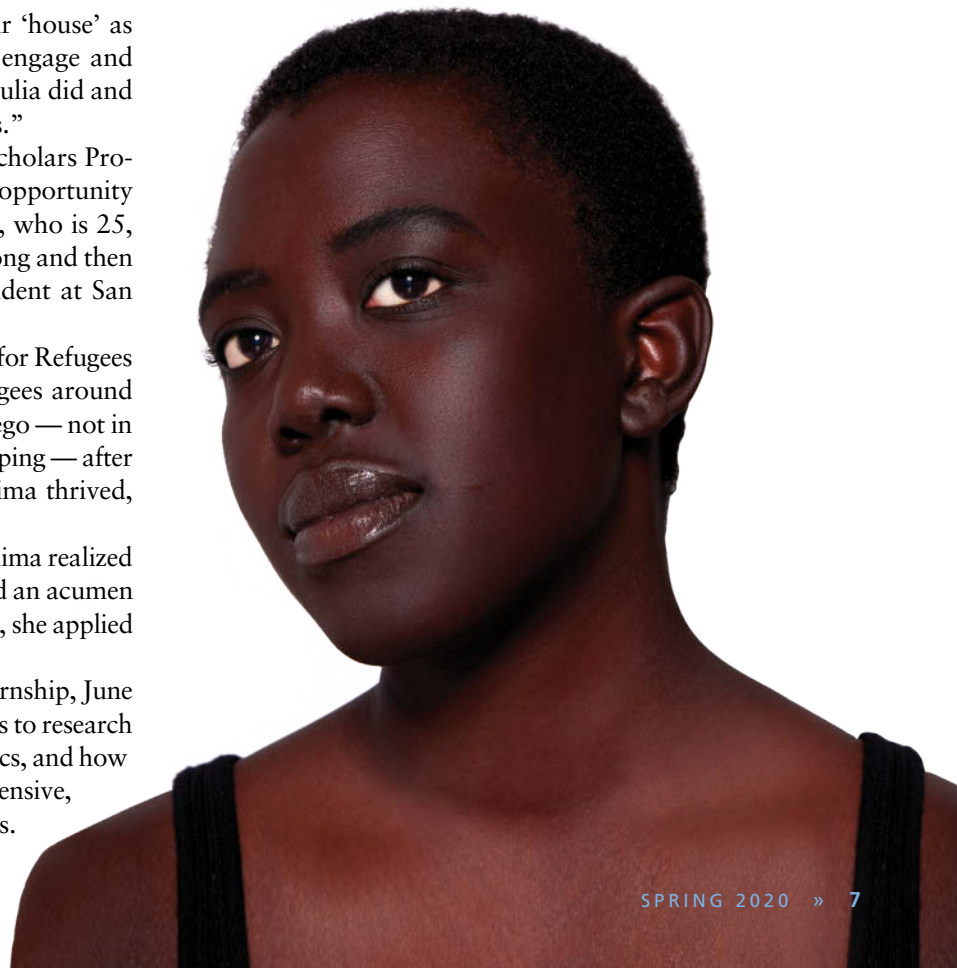

Julima will join BrightHouse for a 10-week internship, June 1 to Aug. 7, as a strategy intern working with clients to research and analyze who they are, their unique characteristics, and how they are best positioned to execute a more comprehensive, purpose-centric strategy across their organizations.

Also, she took the company to task on diversity in their workplace, asking what it was like to be Black in the prestigious firm. After a few milquetoast answers, Julima wanted to know more.

“I went to their [office]. Usually, when you go to the [office] of any company, it’s White,” says Julima. “It was the opposite. I have been impressed every step of the way with BrightHouse.”

Although the company has Atlanta University Center students throughout its parent company BCG, and BrightHouse was founded and is headquartered in Atlanta, this was the first concerted effort to recruit within the AUC.

“For us, the visits to the AUC, and Spelman specifically, were two-fold. First, it was to be more intentional in our recruiting within Atlanta. We think Atlanta has a very unique role as a center of culture and is similar to our other growing offices in Berlin and Paris,” says Ryan Taylor, group creative director in Atlanta. “[Atlanta] provides a valuable point of view for our purpose-centered work. Our clients expect that we will bring teams that are representative and celebrate a diversity of thought. Spelman aligns well with our objectives.”

JANE E. SMITH: A LEGACY OF EMPOWERING LEADERS

BY KIA SMITH, C'2004

On the desk of Jane E. Smith, Ed.D., C'68, sits the bust of educator-activist and women's rights leader Mary McLeod Bethune, the inspiration behind Smith's career as an educator, nonprofit executive and maker of leaders.

"I used the Mary McLeod Bethune model to engage Spelman students in training that would prepare them to be leaders anywhere," says Smith.

In December 2019, Smith retired from her position as vice president for college relations at Spelman after serving four Spelman presidents.

However, her Spelman journey began long before her presidential service. "The adventure started in nursery school, and I walked out in December saying, 'Job well done!'"

Let Her First Steps Be Toward Spelman

"I was raised in a race-conscious family," says Smith, an Atlanta native whose grandfather, the Rev. Harvey Smith, was a Baptist minister and an associate of the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr. "My parents put me in the Spelman College Nursery School because they knew it would mean a foundation for upward mobility as a person who belonged to the Black race."

Smith returned to Spelman as a sociology major in 1964, immediately after the sit-in era of the civil rights movement.

"Eight of us started a group called Sisters in Blackness as the next step to the sit-ins, and our class was there to witness Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s body lay in rest in the [Sisters] Chapel."

It was these experiences that provided Smith with the racial-equity lens that would shape her work throughout her career.

Engaging and Empowering Women

Kimberly Davis, C'81, first encountered Smith in 1977 during her first year at Spelman. She quickly became an admirer.

"Jane has this amazing way of engaging and empowering women," says Davis, who currently works as the executive vice president responsible for social impact, growth initiatives and legislative affairs with the National Hockey League. "I had never met a young woman who had gotten her doctorate from Harvard, and she was this sassy, beautiful, young and vibrant woman who was [assistant to then-President Donald Stewart]."

After working as the director of freshman studies under President Albert E. Manley, Smith was promoted to assistant to President Stewart in 1976. The position placed an alumna in the president's office, a compromise made with students who had demanded the Spelman College Board of Trustees appoint an alumna as president. She assisted Stewart in navigating the city and managing Title III funds and alumnae relations.

More importantly, Smith emerged as a leader who inspired students.

"She has always been an inspirational leader, and I think the women just gravitated toward her leadership style," says Davis. "She was an empowering force for those years and for the years she ran [Spelman's] Leadership Center."

Smith left Spelman to serve in senior leadership positions at several national nonprofits in the '80s and '90s. She was president and chief executive of the National Council of Negro Women and chief executive of Business and Professional Women/USA. She also held leadership positions at INROADS and The Carter Center, and was appointed by President Bill Clinton to the National Women's Business Council.

In 2004, Smith returned to Spelman as executive director of the Center for Leadership and Civic Engagement at the request of President Beverly Daniel Tatum. Davis, who worked with Tatum as an executive on loan from JPMorgan Chase to establish the Leadership Center, felt Smith was the perfect leader to inherit the program she'd begun.

"Jane's passion has always been around the leadership and the empowerment of Black women," Davis says. "She was the perfect one to take the helm of LEADS because she could shepherd it and integrate it with the pedagogy of the school so it would be sustainable."

LEADS was a safe space for women of color to gather annually to discuss the unique challenges of their work experiences, and it empowered students with the leadership skills needed to navigate their future workplaces.

It was under Smith's leadership that the Spelman College Women of Color Conference became the pre-eminent leadership conference for professional women of color in the Southeastern region. Hundreds of Black, Asian, Latina, Native and White women congregated annually in Atlanta to discuss leadership strategies that fostered innovation and advancement through workshops, speeches and testimonies.

One of Smith's most memorable moments from LEADS was convening a conversation between Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, granddaughter of former first lady Eleanor Roosevelt, and former Spelman College trustee the Rev. Mazie Ferguson, great-grandniece of Mary McLeod Bethune.

"When you want to talk about the highest moment of my professional life, [it would be] the embrace of those two women who looked like Mary McLeod Bethune and Eleanor Roosevelt. I cried," Smith says.

In addition to directing WOCC, Smith also established Spelpreneurs and advanced the Women of Excellence Leadership Series, two programs that helped students develop skills needed to become national and global leaders. It was Smith's commitment to leadership and the College that led current President Mary Schmidt Campbell to appoint her vice president for college relations in 2015.

Full Circle

One of Smith's students, Farris Christine Watkins, C'2019, applied for the WEL Series during her senior year. She says the lessons on integrity and intention are standouts for her as she prepares to become chief executive officer at Willie A. Watkins Funeral Home Inc.

"What Dr. Smith taught me has definitely translated. I literally take something from the WEL Series every day, if not twice or three times a day, in my field," says Watkins. "She has definitely had an impact on my life.

"And it's not just the WEL Series, but it was more so her demeanor on campus," continues Watkins, whose great aunt, Coretta Scott King, worked with Smith at the Martin Luther King Center for Nonviolent Social Change.

"From watching her on campus, I could tell that everything she's done – the long career and the longevity that she's had with Spelman – was not by happenstance. She did that with intention."

KARAN KENDRICK'S JOURNEY TO 'JUST MERCY'

BY MAYNARD EATON

For actress Karan Kendrick, C'98, it had been a divinely inspired, 21-year-long Hollywood journey before landing the feature role as Minnie McMillian in the widely acclaimed movie, "Just Mercy."

It was well worth the wait, says Kendrick.

"LA has taught me that this journey as an actor is a marathon, not a sprint," she says. "You've got to commit. You can't halfway do it. So, the best thing we can do is honor the journey. We think it's about the destination; it's about the journey."

"Just Mercy" is based on a true and tragic story of racial injustice regarding the wrongful Alabama conviction of Walter McMillian, who was sentenced to die in 1987 for the murder of an 18-year-old girl, despite evidence proving his innocence. The film stars Academy Award-winner Jamie Foxx as McMillian and popular actor/producer Michael B. Jordan as Bryan Stevenson, the advocate lawyer who ultimately freed McMillian.

Kendrick plays the wife, Minnie McMillian, her best picture show character to date, she admits. She believes it was a role meant for her.

"I do believe that," she says.

"There was a 'yes' and 'amen' on this role. I connected with this role in a way that I am so grateful for. I wanted to honor [Minnie's] life and honor Black womanhood. I did not want to dismiss or take any part of her for granted. I wanted to share her heart and her press and curl."

Kendrick recalls a female fan's favorable comment that "really stuck with me" about Minnie McMillian's portrayal: "Your work is like a love letter to Black women."

Kendrick says, "I hope that signals this a defining component to my career. I love us, and I want to show us in the best possible way — which means showing all of who we are."

"Minnie is not just strong, she is also scared. She's also conflicted. She's also tired," Kendrick says. "During all this, she's still got a job to go to and food to cook. She's also supported by her community. We see that in a way that we don't often see on camera."

In "Just Mercy," Karan Kendrick plays Minnie McMillian, wife of Walter McMillian (Jamie Foxx).

Kendrick stands by her man, who is wrongly convicted and sentenced to die in Alabama in 1987.

Kendrick says she was inspired by the movie and the man behind it all, Bryan Stevenson. After graduating from Harvard, Stevenson headed to Montgomery, Alabama, where he founded the Equal Justice Initiative to defend those wrongly condemned and those not afforded proper representation.

"The real superhero in this story is Bryan Stevenson," Kendrick says. "He is a man without a cape who is changing the world. This movie, when you see it, will change you. You can't walk into this movie and walk out the same. It's not just a movie, it is a movement. It's a change agent."

Kendrick's acting career launched at Spelman College, where she was coached, counseled and mentored by a cast of premier professors, including the "late, great theater department chair" Glenda Dickerson, Paul Jackson and theater professor Joan McCarty, who curated her career.

"We knew we had somebody special," McCarty remembers of Kendrick's Spelman career. "We always expected great things, so we weren't surprised. She was very passionate, and she was very dedicated. The theater department became another home for her. She just distinguished herself. She was gifted in acting and voice, as well."

Kendrick calls her Spelman experience "one of the best decisions I've ever made; four years of sisterhood and empowerment." She says that sisterhood continues to this day and credits her English professor, Akiba Harper, Ph.D., for her success.

"She really helped me put my Spelman experience into a workable context," says Kendrick. "She helped me to understand that life is so much more than getting it right. And, that it's OK to mess up and learn. It's OK to have a journey that consists of ups and downs, and it's really the only way to grow."

Harper, Spelman's Fuller E. Callaway Professor of English since 1987, recalls advising Kendrick that "success is built upon survival" and rejoices that her former student is now enjoying "glowing days."

"I am always excited to support her as a budding actress and certainly as an actress who is going to be really big!" she says.

"Karan epitomizes the Spelman woman. She's been and continues to be an inspiring young woman. She deserves a leading role because she can do it, but that's coming because people now see what she can do."

Daphne Smith

Data Analytics Professional Continues Spelman's Legacy of Pioneering Women in STEM

BY CONNIE GREEN FREIGHTMAN

While growing up in Ocala, Florida, Daphne L. Smith, Ph.D., C'80, never thought she'd become a pioneering mathematician. She just knew she loved math and science. So, when her high school assistant principal, Thelma Menchan Parker, C'34, encouraged her to attend her alma mater, Smith excitedly perused a Spelman College recruitment brochure that promoted women in the sciences.

"When I saw those pictures, I thought I could be one of those Spelman students who study science, as well as math," Smith recalls. "I came in on the first wave of the effort in which the College was trying to steer more Spelman students into the sciences. I came in at a time when they were pioneering women in math."

In 1985, Smith became the first-ever Spelman graduate to earn a Ph.D. in mathematics, and the first African American woman to earn a doctorate in mathematics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

She started her career as a faculty member at the University of Georgia, Spelman and Georgia State University. In 2004, her desire to use her math and statistics skills to make real-world connections prompted a move from the classroom to the corporate world in analyst positions in the healthcare and insurance industries.

Today, Smith works in a new position as a business analytics adviser with Cigna, a global health service company.

"There is so much data that companies want to analyze now. Data has revolutionized the way businesses plan and make decisions," Smith says.

Sharpening a Competitive Edge

That Smith has found success in a data-driven job market where African Americans are underrepresented is not lost on Spelman. As the demand for data science and analytics experts continues to intensify, so has the College's commitment to giving Spelman women a competitive edge in the fields.

By 2021, according to a 2017 Business-Higher Education Forum report, college graduates with a skill set that includes a data background will be two times more likely to be hired than their peers. The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that growing data-science needs will create 11.5 million job openings by 2026. Yet, African American representation in the field is only 1%, according to a 2019 Obsidian Security report on decision-makers in data science.

To prepare students and help close the diversity gap, Spelman professors have been working to integrate data science into the curriculum.

In 2016, Brandeis Marshall, Ph.D., professor of computer science at Spelman, and a colleague at Morehouse College received a three-year, $400,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to train faculty at both institutions on data science principles that apply to interdisciplinary areas ranging from business to biology.

The College also is part of an alliance that received a $200,000 grant from the National Science Foundation two years ago to support faculty in the development of data-science curricula and to increase diversity in the data workforce.

The fields of data science and data analytics are related, yet distinct. Data scientists write algorithms and build statistical models to extract information needed to solve complex problems. Data analysts examine large data sets to identify trends and draw insights to help businesses make more strategic decisions.

Spelman students are engaged in a variety of interdisciplinary projects that examine the societal impact of data science and analytics. From shopping habits and healthcare to education and criminal justice, data-driven decisions affect everyday lives.

For instance, computer science majors Cameryn Boyd and Thulani Vereen, both C'2020, are analyzing data to determine which voters are purged from Georgia voter registration rolls.

Economics major Taylor Brown, C'2021, participated in a 2019 summer research program at the University of Virginia Data Science Institute, where she used mortgage data to investigate the relationship between the rate of home loan denials and factors such as income, race and gender.

"Many debate on how best to define data science," says Raquel Hill, Ph.D., chair and associate professor of computer and information sciences at Spelman. "Most agree that it's not just a combination of the traditional quantitative fields of computer science and statistics, but that it is far broader – encompassing various disciplines that enable us to not only analyze data but to consider, for example, the ethical use of data. Considering the ethical use of data is one way to limit bias that may be introduced when we consider only the data values."

Investing in Data Science

Spelman and other Atlanta University Center Consortium members — Clark Atlanta University, Morehouse College and the Morehouse School of Medicine — launched the AUCC Data Science Initiative in 2019 with a five-year, $8.25 million investment from UnitedHealth Group. The initiative will offer technical classes for AUC students who want to specialize in data science or learn data analysis, as well as provide students from all majors with an expanded facility to extract value from data.

"Data literacy in our current and future workforce is absolutely critical. This need is exacerbated by a dramatic shortage of diversity in the profession," says Patricia Lewis, executive vice president and chief human resources officer of UnitedHealth. "It is our hope that UnitedHealth Group's anchor investment in AUCC's data science program will produce graduates to address the acute shortage of data scientists, but importantly, contribute to a 21st-century healthcare workforce that increasingly delivers culturally competent care."

To that end, the AUCC Data Science Initiative's work is well underway, says AUCC executive director Todd Greene.

One foundational aspect is providing opportunities for faculty development in data science and data analytics. The AUCC hosted a series of faculty development workshops in January. Other 2020 plans include an AUCC Pre-Freshman Data Science Summer Program, an introductory undergraduate foundations data course in the fall, and a data science symposium. The goal is to eventually offer a data science minor, major and graduate introductory course.

Beyond the strong partnership with UnitedHealth, Greene says there is an active discussion on having the initiative join with other potential partners representing a cross-section of industries.

"Jobs in data science are in highest demand and pay well above average starting salaries," he says. "The AUCC Data Science Initiative is well-positioned to be the largest producer of African Americans with data science credentials and to develop leaders who bring diverse thinking, especially given the social and ethical contexts needed to develop insights and to responsibly extract value from data."

Charting a Path

Although the data revolution hadn't emerged during her time at Spelman, Smith credits visionary Spelman math professors like the legendary Etta Z. Falconer, Ph.D., with charting a path for her future achievement. As her adviser and mentor, Falconer encouraged Smith to pursue graduate studies and devised a program to help her get there.

During the fall semester of her senior year, Smith completed an independent study project on numerical analysis with then-Spelman math instructor Sylvia Bozeman, Ph.D., who was completing her doctorate in math at Emory University at the time. That spring, Smith honed her research skills as an intern at the Argonne National Laboratory near Chicago.

“They really put together a special program for my graduate school preparation because nothing of that type existed at that point,” Smith says. “I saw Dr. Falconer as a pioneering Black woman in math.

SMITH CREDITS VISIONARY SPELMAN MATH PROFESSORS LIKE THE LEGENDARY ETTA Z. FALCONER, PH.D., WITH CHARTING A PATH FOR HER FUTURE ACHIEVEMENT.

She had an amazing vision, and it has borne fruit with so many Spelman STEM graduates now.”

Now it is Smith who is considered a trailblazer. Her success helped propel efforts to expand STEM programs at Spelman, says Bozeman, who is now a math professor emerita and co-founder of Enhancing Diversity in Graduate Education, a national mentoring program for women entering graduate studies in mathematical sciences.

“Daphne was an advanced student. She was a pioneering student. We were very excited about her achievement,” Bozeman says. “Often, Ph.D. grads go into teaching, but Daphne has been adventurous. She has used her skills in teaching and industry. As she has learned, moved and experienced more, she has given back to Spelman.”

Smith has been actively involved in the National Alumnae Association of Spelman College since finishing graduate school, joining the local chapter whenever she relocated to a new city. In her role as a past chapter president and the former Great Lakes regional coordinator, she helped revitalize several chapters along the way.

In 2011, she received the NAASC Hall of Fame Award – the organization’s highest honor. While serving as the NAASC national president from 2012 to 2016, she raised more than $100,000 for its Donald and Isabel Stewart Endowed Scholarship.

“Daphne’s technical and very organized, and she loves Spelman like most of us do,” says Sylvia Watts-Flippo, C’98, an engineering manager at Lockheed Martin in San Antonio, Texas, and a member of NAASC’s technology committee.

“Whatever she does, in her career or activities, she gives 100 percent. She’s one of our trailblazers.”

ROCKET SCIENCE

INTRO BY MELODY GREENE, C'2020

An experimental physicist who had dreams of working with gamma-ray spectroscopy;

An engineer who heals sick buildings;

A director at a financial software company who leads teams of leaders; and

A professor who received the Presidential Early Career Award for Scientists and Engineers from President Barack Obama in 2009.

These four exceptional physics majors fuel the “Why Spelman?” question. They share a love for their alma mater and credit the College for equipping them with the confidence, self-efficacy and tools to handle whatever comes their way. Like many other Spelmanites, they are leaders, educators and trailblazers in their industry – from Australia to the United States.

Melody Green is a graduating English major from Atlanta and an aspiring broadcast journalist.

Candace Harris

Answering the Physics Call

BY DONNA WILLIAMS LEWIS, C'79

As Candace Harris, C'2009, puts it, she didn't choose physics. Physics chose her.

It has turned out to be a perfect match.

In December, Harris joined the staff at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, a facility responsible for ensuring the reliability of the nation's nuclear stockpile and for helping to reduce the global threat of terrorism.

"I have always wanted to work in this lab, ever since I started dreaming of gamma-ray spectroscopy at Spelman," Harris says. "I'm very fortunate to work with some amazing scientists."

In her job as an experimental physicist, Harris researches support of nuclear stockpile management and works in nuclear forensics, which is the investigation of nuclear and other radioactive materials to determine their origin and history.

One of her Spelman College physics instructors, Marta Dark McNeese, Ph.D., associate professor in the Department of Physics, remembers getting to know Harris during her years at Spelman.

"She really to me displayed a lot of grit and a lot of determination," McNeese says. "She seemed to just be coming into her own as a scientist."

Harris started at Spelman as a dual degree engineering student, with plans to become an engineer; however, when it was time to move onto the engineering part of the program, she was not accepted at Georgia Tech.

Since she had done well in her physics courses, she decided to pursue a physics major. But, she would need a fifth year to earn the degree. Her situation looked grim until a financial blessing happened. Spelman funded her housing and tuition for that fifth year through the President's Safety Net Fund, also called the Starfish Initiative, which helped fill the funding gap for students unable to meet all their financial obligations before graduation.

"God really showed up," Harris says. "I'm getting teary-eyed thinking about it. I didn't think I was going to finish at Spelman."

Because Spelman didn't have many upper-level physics courses, Harris took most of her classes at neighboring Morehouse College. But courses at Spelman helped set her path, she says. McNeese introduced her to lasers, and Derrick J. Hylton, Ph.D., associate professor of physics, introduced her to gamma-ray spectroscopy.

“Immediately, I took a liking to it,” she says. “I thought it was pretty cool that you can detect the undetectable by just building instrumentation.”

She started looking into where she could continue that type of research and set her sights on Lawrence Livermore.

After graduating as the lone physics major in her class, Harris earned a master’s degree in physics at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. The following year, she landed an internship at Lawrence Livermore, where she published papers on laser-induced plasmas. Then she was off to Florida A&M University, where she did research, published several papers, traveled internationally to physics conferences and, in 2018, received her doctorate in physics.

Upon graduation, Harris was back at Lawrence Livermore to participate in its National Nuclear Security Administration’s Graduate Fellowship Program. At its conclusion, after a year, she was hired, becoming the sixth Black female physicist hired at the 68-year-old laboratory.

She is the second physicist to be recruited from Spelman, says Renée Breyer, director of human resources at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory. “And we are thrilled to have her at LLNL,” she adds.

According to McNeese, the state of women in physics is much like the state of women in the country.

“There’s more of a recognition that we need to go beyond just diversity, and we need to see more equity and inclusion in physics,” she says. “Spelman provides an environment that helps students succeed in settings where they may not see many, or any others, who look like them.

“I think Spelman ... really helps them develop their self-efficacy, so that they are able to see themselves as a physicist even though they might not fit that physicist stereotype,” says McNeese.

Hope Pollonais

Choosing Physics as a Path to Discovery

BY FRANK MCCOY

While many of us see art as color and an arrangement of shapes that tap the visual senses and emotions, this is an oversimplification for Hope Pollonais, C’2009. She sees art as a combination of components that speak to one another. Actually, that is the Spelman College physics graduate’s perspective on all matter.

“It is all about how things work together – balance, space, design,” she says. “When I look at art, it includes those things; thus, it is not only art, it’s science — rather physics.”

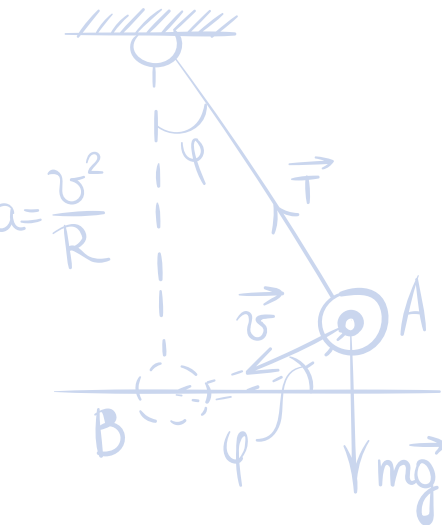

Pollonais makes all things work together as part of the Historic Preservation Design staff of Lord Aeck Sargent, an Atlanta architecture, interior design and planning firm. There, the self-described “doctor for sick buildings” performs preservation, rehabilitation and reconstruction on patients that are historical landmarks and edifices.

“My path to discovery is driven by curiosity and problem-solving,” she says. “The fact that architecture, design, engineering and physics allowed me to be curious with how the world works and rely upon scientific methods in order to describe the natural world is so cool to me!

“Art is part of culture. You can’t speak about art without speaking about science. Art and science are not separate,” says the young Trinidadian, who grew up knowing she wanted to create and discover.

A dual-degree engineering major, Pollonais earned a bachelor’s in physics from Spelman and a bachelor’s in civil engineering from Columbia University.

“The mind of an engineer is to make and discover,” says Retina Burton, director of Spelman’s Dual Degree Engineering Program. “The breadth of this program was perfect to prepare students like Pollonais to excel in diverse careers.”

Pollonais, who also received a master's in architecture from SCI-Arc, a world-renowned center of innovation and one of the nation's few independent architecture schools, arrived on Spelman's campus with interests that included physics, art, cars and buildings. Burton says DDEP assisted Pollonais in completing a physics degree, infused her art interests and aided her in the transfer to Columbia University to complete a civil engineering degree.

Such opportunities gave Pollonais "a sound, broad foundation to pursue various employment opportunities in her career – something DDEP does for all its graduates," says Burton.

Pollonais says Spelman's interdisciplinary learning helped her growth and the welcoming environment helped her to thrive.

"I enjoyed being in a welcoming environment that provided a feeling of sisterhood," says Pollonais, who is one of three sisters who attended Spelman. "Students are able to apply the knowledge gained in one discipline to another discipline to deepen learning."

Pollonais is itching to widen her path at work by being more creative.

"[The work I do] is a specialization where repairs are creative, but not visual," says Pollonais, whose current work includes everything from conception to forensics to filing permits and more.

"I want to do more than repair the Sistine Chapel," she says. "I would like to be Michelangelo who painted the Sistine Chapel."

Jolawn Victor

Making a Global Impact

BY DONNA WILLIAMS LEWIS, C'79

The smoke haze blurring the view of the office buildings behind her was a constant reminder for Jolawn Victor, C'2004, that she was video-conferencing from Australia, where wildfires had raged for weeks.

Victor works halfway around the world from her alma mater as director of emerging markets and global expansion for Intuit, the financial software company that makes TurboTax, QuickBooks and Mint. She is responsible for everything related to QuickBooks' small business accounting software in 160 countries.

She also credits Spelman with helping her, as a Black woman, navigate and seek to diversify tech/corporate environments where "we're still one of very few or sometimes the only."

"The confidence that the Spelman experience equips you with is enduring," she says.

Victor leads a team of leaders who reports to her on everything from marketing to sales to analytics of QuickBooks, now in use by 4.5 million subscribers around the world.

"I have team members in Sydney, India, London and the Bay in California, so it's a complex environment, but also very fun," she says.

Victor earned an MBA from New York University and has worked as a project engineer for General Mills, as director of marketing for Pepsico, and at Intuit since 2016 when she began as a principal product manager and moved up the ranks to her current position.

Last summer, her job moved to Sydney, Australia, where she lives with her husband, Morehouse alumnus Kevan Victor, C'2004, who is a consultant for Deloitte, and their three children, ages 8 to 13.

"So we're a Spelhouse family," Victor says. "It's a team effort. I have a really great partner, and we share the load."

That's especially vital because her job keeps her on the road 40 to 50 percent of the time. On one recent trip, Victor's day began in Malaysia to help set up a new sales team and ended in Singapore, where she met with Intuit digital and marketing agencies, local banks, and later with customers at a feedback event.

"There is a vast world of roles that play in technology," she explains. "The fact that I have an engineering background, a marketing background, and a product background makes me really well-suited to lead a team that has technical capabilities. But, I'm also still running a business."

She believes that one of the keys to enhancing Spelman's success with STEM students is giving them exposure and access to the many different and ever-changing career tracks.

As for her future: "Intuit has so many opportunities," she says. "I'm just excited for whatever the next one is."

Victor's road to this pinnacle began at Spelman College, where she majored in physics and electrical engineering as part of the College's Dual Degree Engineering Program with Georgia Tech. The Spelman sisterhood helped fuel her choice of major, which, for scholarship purposes, was between physics and chemistry.

"I had a great relationship with two of the women who were majoring in physics (Latoya Johnson, C'2003, and Lindsay Hopkins, C'2003), and I knew they would be great study partners," she says, adding that placing herself around others with shared values remains important to her.

Adrienne Stiff-Roberts

Beam Me Up

BY FRANK MCCOY

Science fiction and African American STEM role models helped steer Adrienne Stiff-Roberts, C'99, onto her academic track.

As a girl, the now Duke University Jeffrey N. Vinik professor of electrical and computer engineering saw so much “Doctor Who” and “Star Trek: The Next Generation,” she says “the idea of studying physics seemed completely natural to me.”

In high school, Stiff-Roberts’ connection to the National Society of Black Engineers and a course on lasers shaped her decision to study physics and electrical engineering at Spelman.

It was a Spelman College summer science prep camp that led her to the Atlanta University Center Consortium Dual Degree Engineering Program, a curriculum aimed at significantly increasing the number of minority engineers.

She received a full ride scholarship, including summer NASA internships, to attend Spelman from the NASA Women in Science and Engineering Scholarship program. WISE tested her academically, hardened her survival skills, and provided the encouragement for her to pursue degrees in science/engineering.

Registered in DDEP at Spelman, she received a bachelor’s in physics from Spelman and a bachelor’s in electrical engineering from Georgia Tech. In 2001 and 2004, she received, respectively, her M.S.E. in electrical engineering and a Ph.D., in applied physics from the University of Michigan Ann Arbor.

Lauding Spelman’s nurturing STEM curriculum, Leyte Winfield, Ph.D., associate professor of organic chemistry and chair of the Division of Natural Science and Mathematics at Spelman, says the school’s super power is being “a liberal arts environment that allows students to see the broader cultural and social value of their work.”

Stiff-Roberts says it is just that, Spelman’s ability to broaden viewpoints and create links for how research endeavors can impact society helped her to “appreciate the value of combining disciplines to gain a better understanding of fundamental topics.”

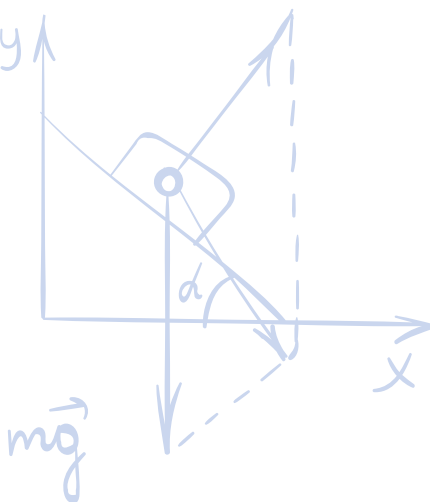

In addition, she says it is the Spelman landscape that inspired her to be bold and confident about who she is.

“The confidence I developed at Spelman made me able to focus on my education in the absence of racial micro-aggressions. This has sustained me throughout my career,” she says.

In 2004, the Phi Beta Kappa member joined Duke, where her Stiff-Roberts Research Group research interests include the synthesis of multicomponent and hybrid (organic-inorganic) materials using a novel approach for organic-based thin film deposition that combines solution and vacuum-processing.

Her career honors include receiving the Presidential Early Career Award for Scientists and Engineers from President Barack Obama in 2009, becoming Duke’s Jeffrey N. Vinik Professor, and receiving the university’s award for Graduate Mentor of the Year in 2016.

Since 2014, she also has directed and taught at the Student Engineers Network: Strengthening Opportunities in Research Saturday Academy for underrepresented minority eighth-grade students enrolled in North Carolina’s Durham Public Schools.

Women in STEM

COMPILED BY MELODY GREENE, C'2020

Approximately 34% of Spelman students major in science, technology, engineering or mathematics, according to James Sanders, director of institutional research at the College. On the pages to follow, we introduce a few of thousands of STEM professionals who proudly represent Spelman in careers ranging from teaching to entrepreneurship.

If you don't see your name on this list, please add it online at womeninstem.

“My mission is to help people of color live longer and healthier lives.”

Alison Brown, Ph.D., C'2007, is a health science policy analyst at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland, and an adjunct faculty member at Prince George's Community College. She received her master's in nutrition and exercise physiology from Columbia University and her doctorate in food policy and nutrition from Tufts University. She is passionate about addressing nutrition-related health disparities through policy, research and community engagement.

“I am passionate about creating more STEM opportunities for women, girls and persons of color.”

LaShauna Evans, Ph.D., C'2002, is a STEM program analyst supporting the U.S. Department of Defense as a contractor in Alexandria, Virginia. She received a doctorate in physiology from the University of Maryland, Baltimore. In addition, she completed a science and technology policy fellowship through the American Association for the Advancement of Science at the U.S. Department of State. Her mission is to better inform policymaking decisions to make substantive improvements in STEM for others.

“I want undergraduate students to discover the joys and challenges of basic science research.”

Latanya Hammonds-Odie, Ph.D., C'89, is an associate professor of biology in the School of Science and Technology at Georgia Gwinnett College in Lawrenceville, Georgia. She completed a master's in pharmacology and a doctorate in cell biology at the University of Alabama at Birmingham before beginning a postdoctoral fellowship at the University of Miami Miller School of Medicine. She also has completed a master's program in educational research from Georgia State University. She believes that providing the best preparation for life is the goal of teaching.

“I use my scientific expertise to develop and sustain diverse, inclusive environments in the STEM workforce.”

Marguerite Matthews, Ph.D., C'2005, is a health program specialist in the Office of Programs to Enhance Neuroscience Workforce Diversity at the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke. She received a doctorate in neuroscience from the University of Pittsburgh and completed a postdoctoral fellowship in behavioral neuroscience at the Oregon Health & Science University.

“As a scientist in a museum, I have the opportunity to understand and learn about collections from a micro-level to a meta-level.”

Alicia McGeachy, Ph.D., C'2013, is an Andrew W. Mellon Foundation Postdoctoral Fellow in the Department of Scientific Research at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. She has a doctorate in chemistry from Northwestern University. She is in a space where she can easily share information and her newfound love for objects to others.

“I educate and steward others to make a positive impact on the grand challenges of our world.”

Talitha Washington, Ph.D., C'96, is a program director at the National Science Foundation in the Division of Undergraduate Education in Alexandria, Virginia. She is also a tenured associate professor of mathematics at Howard University in Washington, D.C. She earned her master's and doctoral degrees in mathematics from the University of Connecticut.

Faculty Highlights

Keith Bolton, associate professor of theater and performance, is currently shooting “Genius: Aretha Franklin,” a biographical series on the legendary performer premiering this spring on NatGeo. “Genius” is the third installment of the series that also featured Albert Einstein and Pablo Picasso. In the episode, Bolton plays Joe Von Battle, a Detroit producer who was the first to record Franklin. The installment stars Academy Award-nominee Cynthia Erivo as Aretha and Emmy-winner Courtney B. Vance as father, C.L. Franklin.

Other Bolton bookings include a role in the Pulitzer Prize-winning play “Sweat,” by Lynn Nottage, at the Alliance Theatre, opening April 2020; a guest star role in the upcoming HBO series “Lovecraft Country,” starring Jurnee Smollett-Bell and produced by Jordan Peele and J.J. Abrams; as Sgt. Clay in the September 2020 release of “The Conjuring: The Devil Made Me Do It”; and a supporting role in the summer Disney tentpole feature “Jungle Cruise,” starring Dwayne Johnson and Emily Blunt.

Karen Brakke, Ph.D., associate professor of psychology, has had her research work on the development of bimanual coordination in toddlerhood published in the Monographs of the Society for Research in Child Development (Volume 84, Issue 2). This monograph issue also was selected to inaugurate the accompanying Monograph Matters website, which provides supporting materials such as commentaries, videos and teaching materials so the research can reach a broader audience.

Shanya Cordis, Ph.D., assistant professor of sociocultural anthropology, published an article, “Forging Relational Difference: Racial Gendered Violence and Dispossession in Guyana,” in Small Axe, a journal that examines ideas that guided the formation of Caribbean modernities. Her article builds on Black and indigenous feminist scholarship and examines the mutually constitutive processes of racial gendered violence and colonial dispossession undergirding Guyanese statecraft. Through an analysis of the colonial construction of the racial-sexual bodies of Amerindian and Afro- and Indo-creole women, it argues that these imbricated violences may better be understood through a feminist analytic and praxis of relational difference.

Hyunjung Chung, D.M.A., associate professor of piano/theory in the Department of Music, released a collaborative CD titled “Woman to Woman: Music for Violin and Piano by Women Composers” (Studio Jeeb, 2019). The CD was made possible by the Holder Fund for Faculty Innovation at Agnes Scott College. Chung, an award-winning pianist, has actively performed throughout North America, Europe and Asia.

Dorian Brown Crosby, Ph.D., assistant professor of political science, published a case study on researching with refugees in SAGE Research Methods Cases. SAGE Research Methods is a globally recognized and utilized library for research sources in various formats. Her peer-reviewed article, “Researching the Political and Civic Engagement of Somali Refugees in the U.S. South Using Semi-structured Interviews,” (SAGE Research Methods Cases, 2019) provides undergraduate and graduate researchers with a pedagogical tool for researching with refugees.

Nirajan Dhakal, Ph.D., assistant professor of environmental and health sciences, published two journal articles this past fall. In November 2019, “Nonstationary influence of the North Atlantic tropical cyclones on the spatio-temporal variability of the eastern United States precipitation extremes” appeared in the International Journal of Climatology, one of seven world-leading science journals published by the Royal Meteorological Society. He also wrote a second article in collaboration with Bhikhari Tharu, Ph.D., assistant professor of mathematics. The article, “On the use of Bayesian quantile regression method to explore the historical trends in extreme precipitation and their connections with large-scale climate patterns over the contiguous USA,” was featured in Theoretical and Applied Climatology, a journal by Springer Science that offers the latest and most significant developments from studies around the world in climate, atmosphere and meteorology.

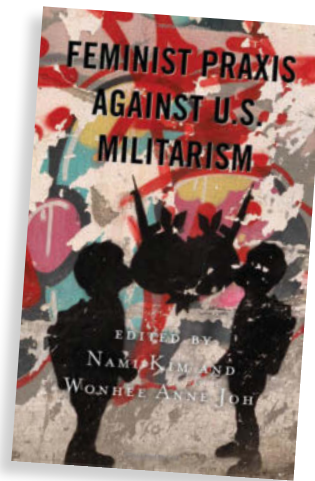

In “A matter of race and gender: An examination of an undergraduate music program through the lens of feminist pedagogy and Black feminist pedagogy,” Paula Grissom-Broughton, D.M.A., looks at theoretical perspectives of feminist pedagogy and provides an alternative lens to examine the teaching and learning process within music education programs in higher education. The essay is featured in the November 2019 issue of the journal, Research Studies in Music.

A dance artist and curator of all things rhythmic, Julie B. Johnson, Ph.D., a lecturer in the Department of Dance Performance and Choreography, wrote chapters for two dance anthologies. In Hot Feet and Social Change: African Dance and Diaspora Communities, the dancer and academician was one of 13 voices in the book. “From Warm-up to Dobale: ‘Community’ Meaning in a West African Dance Class,” her voice helps to negate the myths about African dance while demonstrating its power to awaken identity, self-worth and community respect.

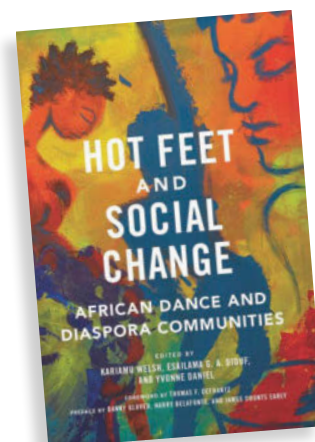

Her second contributing chapter, “Dancing for Justice Philadelphia: Embodiment, Dance, and Social Change,” was featured in African American Arts: Activism, Aesthetics, and Futurity.

“A World Premiere” by Dwight Rhoden, performed by the Atlanta Ballet, featured a commissioned work by associate professor of music Kevin Johnson, D.M.A. Set to Negro spirituals, gospel songs and newly composed music, the project examined themes of faith, devotion, love and loss while exploring a universal message of humanity and compassion. The National Endowment of the Arts project was a heart-and-soul collaboration of the African American experience and showcased members of the Spelman College Glee Club as special guests. “A World Premiere” was one of three works debuted at the Atlanta Ballet in February.

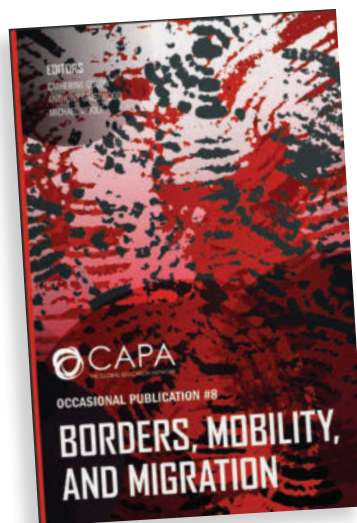

Nami Kim, Ph.D., associate professor of philosophy and religious studies, co-edited Feminist Praxis Against U.S. Militarism. The work is a critical feminist and womanist analysis of U.S. militarism that challenges the country’s ongoing neoliberal, military-industrial complex and its multivalent violence that destroys people’s lives — especially women and other vulnerable populations. This volume challenges the readers to understand the U.S. as a warfare, counterterror and carceral state and its devastating effects on the everyday lives of women, especially women of color, locally, nationally and globally.

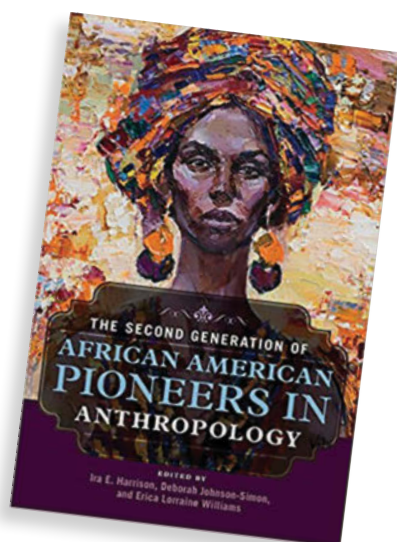

Department of Sociology and Anthropology visiting assistant professor Saira A. Mehmood, Ph.D., was one of several multidisciplinary contributors to Research Involving Participants with Cognitive Disability and Differences: Ethics, Autonomy, Inclusion, and Innovation. Her chapter, “Using Ethnographic Methods to Determine Capacity to Consent Amongst Individuals Diagnosed With Chronic Mental Illnesses,” focuses on strategies for assessing capacity to consent — both formal assessment instruments and informal assessments over time through the process of participant observation. The chapter discusses the difficulties of using formal assessment instruments such as decision trees and quizzes. It discusses how successful participation of individuals diagnosed with chronic mental illnesses with impaired cognition can be included in nonclinical research. The use of ethnographic methods ensures the bioethical principle of autonomy, which requires respect for the decision-making capacities of autonomous persons and follows the bioethical principle of justice to empower the same vulnerable populations within the disability rights movement by including them in the research process through the use of time diaries.

As a synthetic organic chemist with experience in academic, industrial and military laboratories, Leyte Winfield, Ph.D., is no stranger to leading diverse audiences into STEM fields. A prolific writer who has published two textbooks and several publications and who has received funding from the National Science Foundation, Winfield’s latest work, Growing Diverse STEM Communities: Methodology, Impact, and Evidence, profiles programs, practices and teaching innovations designed to improve recruitment, performance and retention in the STEM environment, particularly as they relate to women and individuals from underrepresented ethnic and racial groups.

Dimeji Togunde, Ph.D., vice provost for global education and professor of international studies, and his colleague, Rokhaya Fall, both in the Gordon-Zeto Center for Global Education, published an article in the fall titled “Success in Campus Internationalization at Spelman College: Lessons for Other Institutions” in CAPA: The Global Education Network’s Borders, Mobility, and Migration. The article is a case study of how Spelman has achieved award-winning success in its internationalization efforts.

Erica Williams, Ph.D., associate professor and chair of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, is a coeditor and writer for The Second Generation of African American Pioneers in Anthropology. This volume collects intellectual biographies of 15 accomplished African American anthropologists of the era and explores the scholars’ diverse backgrounds and interests. The book looks at their groundbreaking methodologies, ethnographies and theories. It also sets the subjects in their tumultuous times, when antiracism and anticolonialism transformed the field and the emergence of ideas around racial vindication brought forth new worldviews.

The Granddaughters Club

Keepers of Spelman's Traditions

BY ADRIENNE S. HARRIS

The sight of 2,000 Spelman students processing to Sisters Chapel on Founders Day — clad in white attire with black, close-toed shoes and flesh-toned hosiery — always moves Darnita Killian, Ph.D., C'79, to tears.

"All these women come together to say my home is at Spelman, and my heart is at Spelman," says Killian, former vice president for student affairs. "Wearing white shows uniformity and uniqueness at the same time. Every woman is in white, but in different styles that are true to who they are."

Year after year, Spelman maintains this and other time-honored traditions thanks to members of the Granddaughters Club. Founded in 1910, it is the College's oldest student organization.

"We are here to make sure that for all of the classes that come behind us, the Spelman traditions remain," says Erin Alford, C'2020, a political science major. Alford, whose mother is an alumna, was Miss Granddaughters Club her sophomore year and co-social chair her junior year. Now a senior, she is the club's president.

In addition to Founders Day, the Granddaughters Club shares the College's history and traditions throughout the year and plays a significant role in other special occasions, such as new student orientation, homecoming, baccalaureate and commencement. On move-in day, the club hosts a reception to welcome new legacy students to campus.

Membership in the Granddaughters Club is open to students with any family member who attended Spelman before them: a mother, grandmother, sister, aunt or cousin.

"The Granddaughters Club helps instill a sense of pride in continuing the tradition of being a Spelman woman," says Killian, who is one of 16 members of her family who attended Spelman, starting with her great aunt who graduated from Spelman Seminary in 1897.

Tara Buckner, C'87, president of the National Alumnae Association, also has strong family ties to Spelman. She and 12 family members have attended the College, including her daughter, niece and cousin's daughter who are currently enrolled.

"It's kind of a beautiful thing. We are connected to Spelman and each other by blood and academics," says Buckner. "We love Spelman, and I am very proud of us. I especially look forward to greeting my daughter on the other side of the arch this spring."

While the Granddaughters Club honors family legacies, its members are intentional about also honoring first-generation Spelmanites.

Linda Hart Patton, C'88, associate director of alumnae engagement, served as adviser to the club for seven years. She credits legacy students with expanding the organization's reach through activities.

"There was a sense that to be involved in Granddaughters Club activities you had to be a legacy, and that made the club seem untouchable," says Patton. "The members felt strongly that they wanted to dispel that myth."

"We don't want anyone to feel left out," says Raven Moore, C'2022, a political science major whose aunt is an alumna. In her role as the 2019 Miss Granddaughters Club, Moore is the face of the club to all Spelmanites. "As keepers of Spelman's traditions, it is important for us to speak to everyone."

The Granddaughters Club's campus-wide events have included a fashion show, in which students modeled options wearing white ensembles; a panel discussion about the meaning of sisterhood today; and a display of historical facts about Spelman in the Manley College Center.

During homecoming 2019, the club created a Line of Legacy handprint mural on the window in Upper Manley. The entire community was invited to dip a hand in one of three paint colors — light blue for Granddaughters Club members, royal blue for alumnae, and white for students and family members — and stamp it on the glass to signify the ways people are connected to the Spelman tradition.

"Spelman, itself, is a wonderful sisterhood. The overarching unifier that brings us all together is Spelman," says Killian. "The Granddaughters Club is just another thing that helps make the Spelman experience special."

Black Bourgeois: Class & Sex in the Flesh (The University of Minnesota Press, 2019) by Candice M. Jenkins, C'96, explores forces that keep Black people vulnerable even in economically privileged lives. Through examination of race and class status in literary texts, Jenkins, who is associate professor of English and African American studies at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, reveals a conflicted relationship between Blacks and privilege. Focusing on the works of Toni Morrison, Spike Lee, Danzy Senna, Rebecca Walker, Reginald McKnight, Percival Everett, Colson Whitehead and Michael Thomas, Jenkins reveals a shift from post-civil rights to Black Lives Matter; from an emphasis on privilege and progress to an emphasis on vulnerability and precariousness. By analyzing how these narratives stage the fraught interaction between the Black and the bourgeois, she offers renewed attention to class as a framework for the study of Black life — a necessary shift in an age of rapidly increasing income inequality and societal stratification. Black Bourgeois challenges the assumed link between blackness and poverty that has become so ingrained in the United States, reminding us that privileged subjects, too, are “classed.” Jenkins offers a rigorous and nuanced grasp of how African Americans live within complex, intersecting identities.

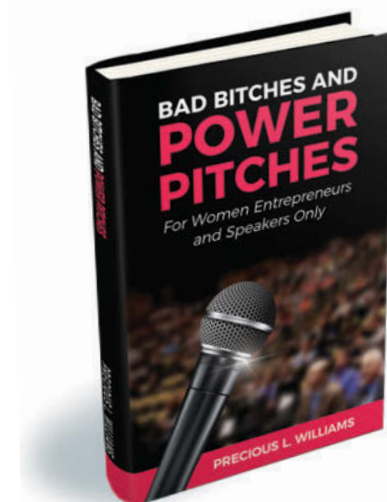

I Said What I Said! (ARCH Publishing, January 2019) is a children’s book written by Chanelle Cunningham, C'2015, aimed to increase the self-efficacy of Black elementary-age children. “I am using my educational platform to inspire children to be unapologetically great, and I am using my position as an author to promote the tools to do so. The work I do cultivates the idea of thought leadership at an early age,” says Cunningham. The book’s main character, Macy, understands that not only do words have power, but so do thoughts. She leads the reader on a tour of a day in her life, teaching and exemplifying what it means to have a positive mindset. She imparts intentional and valuable advice on how to handle life and does it with a spark of humor. The book’s lessons are simple enough for young children to grasp, but deep enough to be appreciated by older audiences.

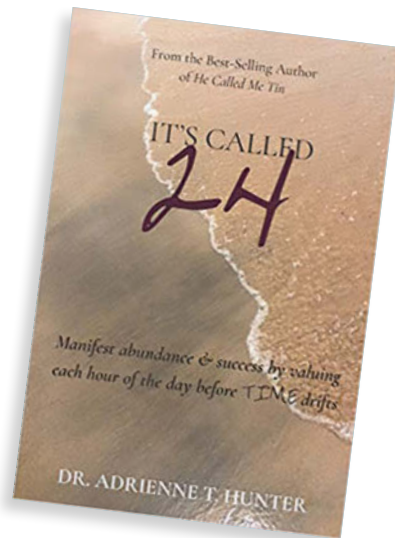

Engage, Connect, Protect: Empowering Diverse Youth as Environmental Leaders (New Society Publishers, November 2019), by Angelou Ezeilo, C'92, explodes the myth that concern about the state of our land, air and water is primarily of interest only to wealthy White communities. The book reveals the deep and abiding interest that African American, Latino and Native American communities – many of which are in degraded and polluted parts of the country – have in the environment. It is a wake-up call for businesses, activists, educators and policymakers to recognize the work of grassroots activists in these communities and to create opportunities for engaging with youth as the next generation of environmental stewards. Part eye-opening critique of the cultural divide in environmentalism, part biography of a leading social entrepreneur, and part practical toolkit for engaging diverse youth, Engage, Connect, Protect covers why communities of color are largely unrecognized in the environmental movement. Included is a curriculum for engaging diverse youth and young adults through culturally appropriate methods and activities, as well as a resource guide for connecting mainstream America to organizations working with diverse youth groups on environmental projects, training and employment.

Bad Bitches and Power Pitches: For Women Entrepreneurs and Speakers Only (Pen Legacy, 2019), written by Precious Williams, C'2001, is a step-by-step guide to winning at the game of life. Have you ever wondered what some women entrepreneurs and speakers do to stand out and have prospects, the media and investors seeking them out? Williams, a serial entrepreneur, international professional speaker and 13-time elevator pitch champion, tells readers how to transcend from average to extraordinary. Despite growing up in poverty, Williams took the business, television and media worlds by storm through the power of being a “bad bitch.” Wherever you are in your entrepreneurial journey, this no-holds-barred, no-nonsense book will show you how to utilize your “bad-bitch” mentality to achieve your dreams.

Just in time to manifest and improve for the new decade, Adrienne Hunter, Ph.D., C'2005, has written It's Called 24: Manifest abundance and success by valuing each hour of the day before TIME drifts (Life's Humble Hunt Prints, 2019). Hunter, who is the best-selling author of He Called Me Tin and an award-winning global health informaticist and humanitarian, shares practical and proven time-management guidance for daily living, career managing, parenting and achieving goals.

Butterfly Landing (Lifting As We Climb Consulting, 2019), written by licensed clinical psychologist Kimani Norrington-Sands, Ph.D., C'93, brings the painful issue of child sexual abuse out of the shadows of secrecy and shame. The reader is introduced to Maya, an African American young girl who has experienced sexual abuse. Butterfly Landing invites the reader on Maya's journey as she learns how to express her feelings and thoughts, seek help and start the healing process. To further enhance learning and support, the book includes a note to parents and guardians. Butterfly Landing was informed by Norrington-Sands's personal experiences as a child sexual abuse survivor, as well as her professional work supporting the healing of children, adolescents, adults and families.

Philathia Bolton, Ph.D., C'2002, assistant professor of English at the University of Akron, co-edited Teaching with Tension: Race, Resistance, and Reality in the Classroom, a volume of original essays (Northwestern University Press, 2019). Bolton's chapter in the book is titled “The Potential of a Moment: Race, Literacy and Black American Literature.” Her colleagues, Cassander L. Smith and Lee Bebout, are co-editors and also have essays featured in the book.

In her new book, We Met at the Bridge Table (Independently published, 2019), Delores Turner, C'65, chronicles the contributions of six African American women who have made a major impact in their local, state and national communities. Among them are the secretary to W.E.B. Du Bois; the first Black female to desegregate the University of South Carolina; and a female graduate of all-male Morehouse College. For more than three decades, Turner was an educator in Atlanta Public Schools. A prolific contributor of opinion pieces to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, she was hired as a reporter by the Cascade Patch for its Seniors section, which led to her being asked to serve as the History and Archives chairperson of the American Bridge Association. She began writing profiles on interesting bridge personalities and began submitting articles on ABA's history to the organization's quarterly magazine. Proceeds from the book will be donated to Spelman College.

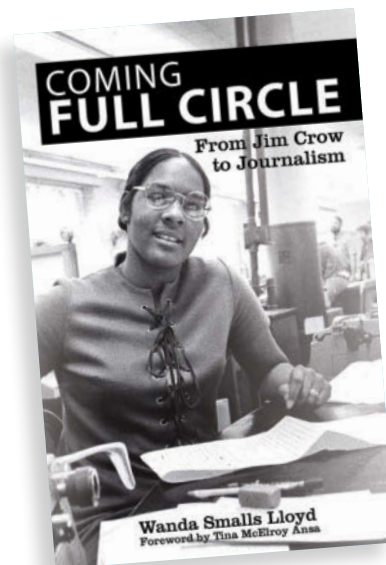

C. Eileen Watts Welch, C'68, has written the afterword and conducted extensive research for a book titled Aaron McDuffie Moore: An African American Physician, Educator, and Founder of Durham's Black Wall Street (The University of North Carolina Press, May 2020). The book is authored by Blake Hill-Saya and includes a foreword by Rep. G. K. Butterfield. Moore (1863–1923) was the first practicing African American physician in Durham, North Carolina. He established the Durham Drug Company and the Durham Colored Library; was at the helm of Lincoln Hospital, the city's first secular, freestanding African American hospital; co-founded North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company; helped launch Rosenwald schools for African American children statewide; and fostered the development of Durham's Hayti district. He was one-third of the mighty "Triumvirate" (alongside John Merrick and C.C. Spaulding) credited with founding Durham's famed Black Wall Street and establishing Durham as the capital of the African American middle class in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Coming Full Circle: Jim Crow to Journalism (NewSouth Books, February 2020) is Wanda Smalls Lloyd's, C'71, memoir of her growing up privileged and educated in the restricted culture of the American South in the 1950s and 1960s. Her path was shaped by segregated social, community and educational systems; religious and home training; a strong cultural foundation; and early leadership opportunities. Despite Jim Crow laws that affected where she lived, how she was educated, and the civil rights denied to her, Lloyd grew up to realize her childhood dream of being a professional journalist, eventually holding some of the nation's highest-ranking newspaper editorial positions and becoming one of the first African American women to be the top editor of a mainstream daily newspaper. Along the way, she helped her newspapers and other media organizations understand how their lack of diversity affected perceptions of accuracy and balance for their audiences. Her memoir is thus a window on the intersection of race, gender, culture and the media's role in our uniquely American experiment in democracy. How Lloyd excelled in a profession where high-ranking African American women were rare is a memorable story that will educate, entertain and inspire. Coming Full Circle is an exploration of her journey from growing up in Savannah, Georgia, to editing roles at seven daily newspapers around the country, and circling back to her retirement in Savannah, where she teaches journalism to a new generation.

Gwenelle Styles O'Neal, C'70, is the author of From Oppression to Inclusion: Social Workers Advancing Change (Cognella, 2018). Designed to encourage conversation, self-reflection and social analysis, the book is well-suited for graduate-level social work courses in diversity and provides students with a framework for examining the history of oppression and how it perpetuates social divisions and injustice. The text features culturally affirming material to help readers develop awareness of multicultural and intersectional voices, and promotes the practices of collaboration and capacity-building with community members to advance change. O'Neal has divided the text into four parts: Part I helps students dismantle the generalized categories many individuals are placed in by officials and instead stresses the basic needs of food and shelter for all, the shared connection to family and the vast range of identity perspectives. Part II presents the history of social welfare organizations; examines the relationship between racism, discrimination and economics; and reviews the identities most often connected to exclusionary messages. Part III shows how institutions that provide services to community citizens operate. Part IV explores the history of oppression in the United States and the role of the social worker to help readers understand innovative opportunities to provide leadership and facilitate partnerships with service users and community entities to advance social and economic justice. O'Neal is a professor in the Graduate Department of Social Work and a faculty mentor at West Chester University. She earned her Ph.D. in social welfare from Columbia University and her master's degree in group work from New York University. O'Neal, who has authored and co-authored many books, book chapters and articles on social work, is a licensed social worker in New Jersey.

take NOTES

Forbes has named Rosalind Gates Brewer, C'84, group president and chief operating officer for Starbucks and chair of the Spelman College Board of Trustees, to its 100 Most Powerful Women list. She also was profiled in the October 2019 issue of Fortune magazine.

Kathaleena Edward Monds, Ph.D., C'86, is one of 19 scholars selected for the 12th Education Policy Fellowship Program supported by the Georgia Partnership for Excellence in Education.

Whitney Barr, C'2013, is the recipient of the first Landscape Architecture Foundation Honor Scholarship for Inclusive Community Design, a $10,000 award that supports students who want to address large-scale design in underserved urban communities.

Spelman College history professor Brandi Brimmer, Ph.D., C'94, is featured in an article in The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, where she discusses how the movie "Harriet" depicts the broader experiences of enslaved women. She addresses Tubman's role in leading a secret military mission in South Carolina's low country. Brimmer, an expert in African American history with a focus on Black women and families in the 19th century, also was interviewed by History.com.

A trailblazer in the battle against voter suppression, Stacey Abrams, C'95, and her group, Fair Fight 2020, are spending $5 million before next year's elections to make sure people can exercise their voting rights, according to a Dec. 4, 2019, Bloomberg.com article. Abrams is also executive producer of a CBS drama based on her novel titled "Never Tell," which she wrote under her pen name, Selena Montgomery. The story centers on a star linguistics professor who partners with a charismatic investigative journalist after discovering a cryptic message that serves as the only clue in a missing-person case.

Moriana "Mo" Ivory, C'91, is teaching a new and innovative legal course at Georgia State University on rapper, actor and philanthropist Christopher "Ludacris" Bridges. Titled "The Legal Life of Ludacris," the course gives students a firsthand glimpse into Bridges's legal decisions and is part of the university's Entertainment, Sports and Media Law Initiative led by Ivory.

Kendra Mells, C'2014, was named to the National Black Lawyers' Top 40 Under 40 class of 2019.

South Bronx native Bintou Bakusa Jobarteh, C'2019, recently shared both her challenges and triumphs as a first-generation student navigating through college in an editorial she penned for Forbes.com.

Candice Nicole Hargons, Ph.D., C'2005, has been awarded a Presidential Citation from the American Psychological Foundation for her research and commitment to bringing awareness to social justice agendas in psychology.

Andrea Williams- Kingslow, M.D., C'85, is named one of the top doctors in the Washington, D.C., area by Washingtonian Magazine. She has been nominated as a top doctor by the magazine for the sixth time.

Georgianne Thomas, M.D., C'64, recently appeared on an episode of "Black Women OWN the Conversation." The town hall, speak-easy style TV show featured an audience of 100 Black women discussing beauty, motherhood, love, body and soul. Stacey Abrams, C'95, was a panelist on the show.

The Houston City Council now has two Spelman women serving on it. The Houston Chronicle declared that Letitia Plummer, C'92, defeated investigative researcher Anthony Dolcefino in early returns for the seat vacated by Amanda Edwards, who has launched a campaign for the U.S. Senate. Carolyn Evans-Shabazz, Ph.D., C'76, defeated rap icon Brad "Scarface" Jordan for Houston City Council District-D in a December runoff election. The position was formerly held by Dwight Boykins, who opted to pursue a mayoral bid instead of seeking re-election.

Kimberly Griffie Jackson, Esq., C'93, recently accepted the position executive director for the Institute for Strategic Policy Solutions at St. Petersburg College, Seminole campus, effective Dec. 2, 2019.

Heather McTeer-Toney, C'98, national field director for Moms Clean Air Force, wrote an op-ed for The New York Times that features Spelman environmental science professor NaTaki Osborne Jelks, Ph.D., C'95. Jelks helped start the West Atlanta Watershed Alliance, an organization that helped protect one of Atlanta's oldest Black neighborhoods from sewer overflows.

BET Networks has named Traci Blackwell, C'90, its executive vice president for scripted programming. In this newly created position, Blackwell oversees the development of original scripted programming and casting for BET and its recently launched streaming service BET+. She comes to BET from the CW, where she most recently served as senior vice president for current programs.

In October, Meredith Corp. named Shona Pinnock, C'95, director of diversity and inclusion. The sociology major is responsible for implementing diversity and inclusion programs for Meredith, a leading media and marketing company whose products reach approximately 180 million American consumers.

The latest endeavor of Linda Goode Bryant, C'71, an urban farm program called Project EATS, was recently featured in The New York Times. The idea, she said, came to her while she was filming a documentary about the 2004 presidential election.

Adrienne Walker, C'2008, will return to the Broadway stage to reprise the role of "Nala" in the critically acclaimed "The Lion King." Walker returns to the role after playing "Hattie" in the Tony-nominated revival of "Kiss Me, Kate."

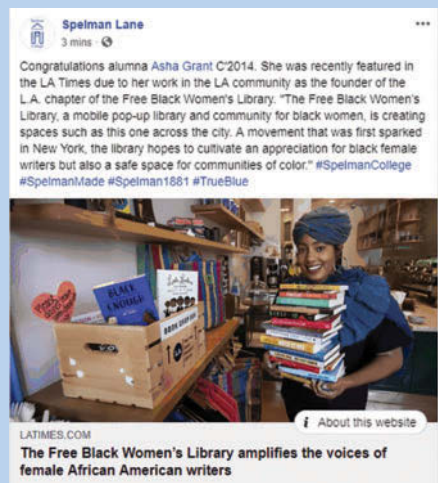

Angela Baskerville, C'87, vice president for technology development at AT&T, was a panelist for the Women of Color FashTech Workshop on Oct. 15, 2019, in the NASA Auditorium. Sponsored by AT&T of Georgia, the workshop allowed Spelman and Clark Atlanta University students interested in interdisciplinary careers in e-commerce, retail, media, telecommunications and tech to gain insight from industry professionals.

Danielle Dickens, Ph.D., C'2009, assistant professor of psychology, received the 2019 Mary Roth Walsh Teaching the Psychology of Women Award during the American Psychological Association Convention.

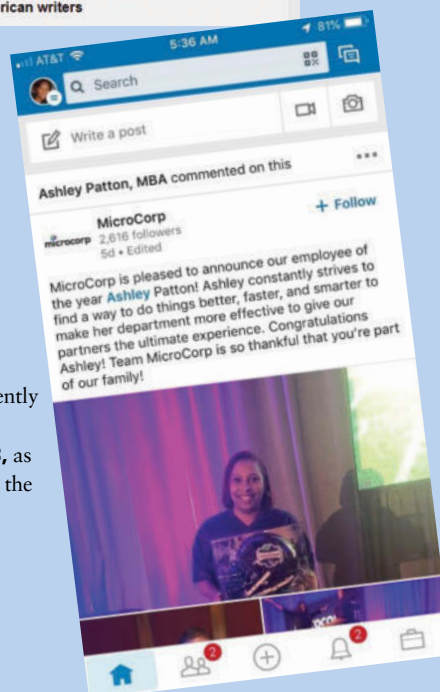

T. Shyvonne Stewart, C'2005, made her Broadway debut as a standby understudy in "The Lightning Thief: The Percy Jackson Musical." She was also in the original cast for the first national tour this past year.

Angela W. Calloway, J.D., C'82, president of the Detroit Association of Women's Clubs Inc., received the Spirit of Detroit Award from Councilwoman Mary Sheffield of District 5 Oct. 11, 2019. Calloway fought to have a secondary street sign, which now sits at the intersection of Brush and Ferry streets, renamed in honor of Rosa L. Gragg. She was the club's former president who outsmarted the era's racist housing laws and desegregated the iconic block in what is now Detroit's cultural center.

Asha Grant, C'2014, was featured in the Los Angeles Times on her work as founder of the Los Angeles chapter of the Free Black Women's Library, a mobile pop-up library and community that cultivates an appreciation for Black female writers and provides a safe space for communities of color.

MicroCorp recently named Ashley Patton, C'2013, as its Employee of the Year.

Virginia Gov. Ralph Northam appointed Tammy Smith Mann, C'87, to the Virginia State Board of Education July 26, 2019.

Illinois Gov. J.B. Pritzker appointed census co-coordinator Marishonta Wilkerson, C'2010, to co-lead a comprehensive effort to ensure an accurate and complete 2020 Census count for the state of Illinois. The announcement was made Sept. 16, 2019.

Ada E. Brown, C'96, has become the first Black woman to serve as a U.S. district judge for the Northern District of Texas, making her one of two Black appellate jurists in the state. The Senate voted 80-13 to confirm her nomination Sept. 11, 2019.

The Atlanta Area Council and Boy Scouts of America selected Christel Jones Jackson, C'84, as a 2019 Whitney M. Young Jr. Service Award recipient. The award recognizes significant contributions made to the metro Atlanta community in helping hard-to-serve neighborhoods. She was presented the award at an annual luncheon at the Atlanta Marriott Marquis Oct. 23, 2019.

Chelesa Fearce, C'2017, was recently awarded a full scholarship and a stipend to cover living expenses to attend Yale Medical School. While in high school, she battled homelessness and lived in extended-stay motels in Clayton County, Georgia. Her remarkable story was recently featured in The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

Wells Fargo named Spelman trustee Colleen Taylor, C'90, head of merchant services, effective Aug. 26, 2019. Taylor, who was named to the PaymentsSource.com Most Influential Women in Payments 2019 list, brings nearly 30 years of financial services experience to the position. Her new office is based in New York City.

Anne Collins Smith, C'96, curator of collections at the Spelman College Museum of Fine Art, recently attended an inaugural art leadership program held at Princeton University. The Curation, Leadership, Artistry and Practice Program, a partnership between the Princeton University Art Museum and the HBCU Alliance of Museums and Art Galleries, is designed to help increase diversity in art leadership.

Tikenya Foster-Singletary, Ph.D., C'97, senior lecturer in Spelman's Department of English, participated in the 2019 summer session of the Georgia Teaching Fellow Program. The program provides higher education faculty with expanded opportunities for developing important teaching skills.

Suneye Rae Holmes, Ph.D., C'2004, an instructor in Spelman's Department of Economics, recently shared her thoughts with CNN.com on the controversy involving the Canadian bonnet company NiteCap.

A month after graduation, computer science major Treasure Goddard, C'2019, landed her dream job and moved to San Francisco to participate in Twitter's associate product manager program. She will receive training, mentoring and rotating assignments with various product teams at Twitter.

Novelist and playwright Pearl Cleage, C'71, received the August Wilson Playwright Award at the 16th biennial National Black Theatre Festival in Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

McClatchy newspapers recently named Cynthia DuBose, C'2002, senior editor for special projects. She will lead McClatchy's Priorities Project, which focuses on election-year conversations about the policy issues that are most important to the readers of the company's 30 newspapers.

Krystle Watler, C'2004, was recognized as one of Ad Age's Women to Watch in the U.S. advertising industry. In June 2019, ADCOLOR, a not-for-profit organization whose mission is to celebrate and champion diversity in the creative industries, recognized her as a "rock star" in the advertising industry.

Michelle Bradley Emebo, C'2007, was recently profiled by the Chicago Tribune for being selected from thousands of candidates as one of the American Heart Association's 2020 Real Women. After battling post-partum hypertension, she took a stance and reversed heart disease, and is encouraging other women to take control of their health.

Sandile Hlatshwayo, C'2006, attended the IMF-World Bank Annual Meetings in Bali, Indonesia, in October 2018, to present her research on corruption. She and her co-authors explored how news coverage of corruption can help us better understand its effects. They used more than 665 million newspaper articles to create news-flow indices of corruption and anti-corruption efforts for 30 economies.

Shanae S. Buffington, Esq., C'2003, was elected president of the Sacramento County Bar Association. She will serve as 2019-2020 chair of the California State Bar's Client Security Fund Commission.

Shaun Robinson, C'84, received the Game Changer Award by MLK Community Hospital. The award acknowledges her work with the S.H.A.U.N. Foundation for Girls, which helps to improve the lives of underserved and underrepresented girls.

Sheila Alexander-Reid, C'81, director of LGBTQ affairs in the executive office of Mayor Muriel Bowser in Washington, D.C., was named an inaugural Business of Pride honoree by the Washington Business Journal.

Yvette Monique Davis-Smith, MD, C'90, has been recognized as the 2019 Educator of the Year by Navicent Health for her contributions to healthcare, health education and health equity. She is director of the Family Medicine Residency Program. Navicent Health is the leading provider of healthcare in central and south Georgia.

Taylor Yarbrough, C'2013, was among several women selected for The Ad Club of New York's i'mPART Fellowship Program. The program helps women pursue their goals and elevate them from mid-level to executive level by providing the access, tools and nurturing necessary for them to grow and thrive in all aspects of the advertising industry.

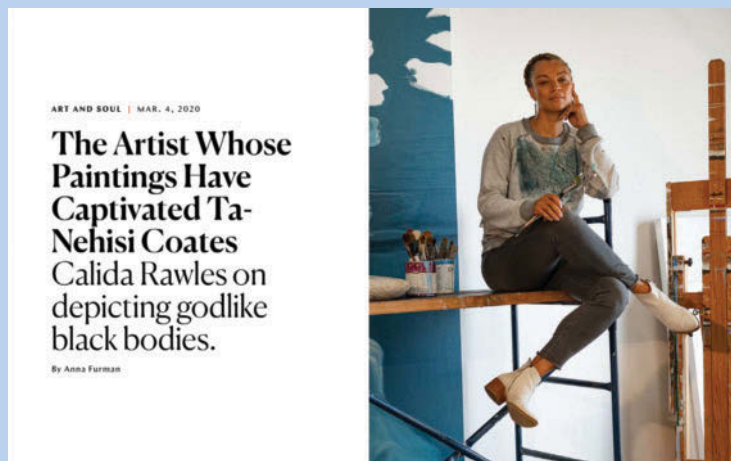

Elizabeth Monique Smith, C'2018, was one of 15 graduate students selected worldwide to attend the TERENO NEON Carbon Workshop in Düren, Germany, July 2019. An environmental science major, Smith is currently pursuing graduate studies at the University of Delaware, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, Department of Plant and Soil Sciences.

The Actors Studio Drama School welcomed critically acclaimed actress of the stage and screen, LaTanya Richardson Jackson, C'71, as a guest host for a special episode of Inside the Actors Studio. Her featured guest was director, producer, actress and activist Alfre Woodard. Jackson also joined the Fordham University Theatre Program in fall 2019 as the Denzel Washington Endowed Chair in Theatre.

Calida Rawles, artist extraordinaire, and her new debut show Various Small Fires were featured in several publications, including LA Weekly and New York Media's The Cut story: "The Artist Whose Paintings Have Captivated Ta-Nehisi Coates Calida Rawles on depicting godlike black bodies." One of Rawles' painting graces the cover of Coates' 2019 debut novel, The Water Dancer.

Michelle P. Burris, C'2014, senior policy associate at The Century Foundation, published her first article about a plan to reduce large racial and economic achievement gaps in Howard County, Maryland, by allowing students of different backgrounds to go to school together.

Littane Bien-Aime, C'2009, published an article in Blavity on the importance of HBCU homecomings, specifically at Spelman and Morehouse colleges.

Nicole Venable, C'91, was one 2019's Most Inspiring Leaders by the Rainbow Push Coalition, headed by the Rev. Jesse Jackson. She was honored for her philanthropy, community service and mentorship of women of color.

In celebration of its 25th anniversary, the spring 1994 line of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc., Eta Kappa Chapter, donated $160,000 to Spelman College.

Tamika Sims, Ph.D., C'2000, is one of several adjunct professors at the Morehouse School of Medicine leading a new effort to provide online programs for a master of science in biotechnology and an executive master of public health.

Targeting working professionals in the life sciences/public health industry, the online programs advance the institution's mission by extending learning opportunities to students without the restrictions of location or time.

A biology major at Spelman, Sims went on to receive a master's in biomedical science (with an emphasis in microbiology) from Georgia State University and a doctorate in virology and immunology from MSM. She says she wants to open doors for other industry professionals who want to advance their careers.

"When I was a student, there was no science program that was directly focused on supporting students to pursue jobs in industry, supporting entrepreneurial efforts or on guiding them down a path that is directly linked to the evolution of scientific careers," says Sims, who is also the director of food technology communications at the International Food Information Council. "This program does all of that, and the fact that it is offered online is an added draw for professionals looking to propel their career goals."

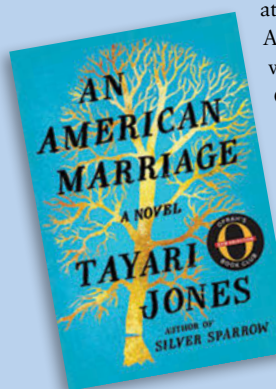

Adrianna Mitchell, C'2013, was featured on Season 1 Episode 1 of the NBC show "Lincoln Rhyme: Hunt for the Bone Collector."

Tayari Jones, C'91, has been named the winner of the 2019 Clara Johnson Award for Women's Literature by the Jane's Stories Press Foundation for her bestselling tour de force, An American Marriage. She received a cash award presented at a special reception. Additionally, the novel was named one of Bill Gate's five books to enjoy this winter.

Gretchen Cook-Anderson, C'90, an award-winning marketing executive, has been promoted to assistant vice president for diversity recruiting and advising at Chicago-based IES Abroad. With 26 years of experience in marketing and public relations, her efforts over the past nine years have led to 112% growth in enrollment diversity in IES Abroad programs, which represents nearly 20,000 students of color.

Yayntilaa Monay-Jacqueline Lancaster, C'2014, is the recipient of the Work Hard Award from Democracy Prep Public Schools in New York.

A photo by photojournalist Regina H. Boone, C'92, has made CNN's list of "100 photos that defined the decade." The 2016 photo is of a toddler afflicted by the contaminated water in Flint, Michigan. Time magazine used it as its cover for its Feb. 5, 2016, edition.

Spelman's Center for Leadership and Civic Engagement presented the unsung hero story of Dovey Johnson Roundtree, C'38, civil rights and criminal defense attorney, ordained minister and U.S. Army veteran, Nov. 21, 2019, in Sisters Chapel. Her book, Mighty Justice: My Life in Civil Rights, which she co-authored with Katie McCabe, was ranked No. 4 on Oprah Winfrey's 10 Best Books to Read in December.

Tiana Barnwell, C'2019, is featured in the December 2019 issue of ESSENCE magazine. She is included on a list of social justice activists who proved there was no obstacle big or small that Black women did not overcome in 2019.

Angela Banks Jourdain, M.D., C'89, has been elected a Fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine.

Stevie Gray, C'2001, was recently featured in an article by Access Weekly for her all-star attitude as the vice president for ticket operations for the Golden State Warriors and Chase Center Box Office. Access Weekly is a digital newsletter powered by the International Ticketing Association.

Donor Roll 2019

Fiscal Year 2019 (July 1, 2018, through June 30, 2019) was a momentous fundraising year for Spelman College. More than $25.3 million was raised. We are grateful for the generosity of each of our contributors and several new leadership gifts and commitments of more than $3 million were made. These gifts help execute the strategic goals of Delivering the Spelman Promise, Elevating the Spelman Difference, Enhancing Operational Excellence, and Promoting Academic Innovation. Delivering the Spelman Promise – to ensure that no student is forced to suspend her education because she lacks the financial resources – is our No. 1 objective. These four objectives work hand in hand to uphold Spelman College's standard of excellence. Please join us in thanking the FY 2019 Leadership Donors. Read more about our strategic plan.

25@25 Campaign Helps College Keep Pace With Technology

BY VICKIE G. HAMPTON

In spring 2019, Spelman was ranked No. 6 in the list of Most Innovative Schools by U.S. News & World Report. But given the speed of technology, there's no time for the College to rest on its laurels.

Spelman received a critical leg up in the never-ending race to keep pace with technology with the 25@25 campaign, started by two alumnae and Spelman Board of Trustees members, Gena Hudgins Ashe, C'83, and Celeste Watkins-Hayes, C'96.

To date, the campaign has raised over $1.25 million. The donations will fund six of the College's 15 mid- and long-term technology initiatives, including cybersecurity, a learning management system, campus fiber upgrade, cross-registration automation, a campus safety app, and the Atlanta University Center fiber ring. The fiber ring will connect Spelman with the Atlanta University Center Robert W. Woodruff Library, Clark Atlanta University, Morehouse College, and Morehouse School of Medicine.

"I am excited to report that we are making measurable progress on several near-mid term technology initiatives," says John Wilson, Spelman's CIO and vice president for Technology Services. "Cybersecurity is our No. 1 priority because reports show that 35 percent of all cybersecurity incidents occur in the higher education space. Cybersecurity will remain at the forefront of our efforts until the high-priority milestones have been accomplished."

One initiative is already being felt—literally. The rumbling of heavy equipment and the surge of construction workers on campus are signs that the fiber network upgrade has begun in earnest and will continue until the expected completion date in the fall.

Many schools, particularly HBCUs, have a long way to go in upgrading and maintaining the technology infrastructure of entire campuses. Finding the funds to upgrade, and just as importantly, sustain technology innovations remains an ongoing challenge.

The 25@25 campaign is a critical new channel of support for the College's technology ambitions. The campaign also delivered a historic milestone. For each fiscal year from 2006 to 2015, the total alumnae giving ranged from $1.3 million to $2.5 million. With the success of the campaign, fiscal year 2019 will go on record as one of the most significant years for alumnae giving, with a total of $2.8 million in donations.

"These women are redefining how our alumnae are giving as they move from charity to philanthropy," says Jessie Brooks, vice president for Institutional Advancement. "With these gifts, they are making a major impact that will have ramifications for the College's future as a provider of a world-class 21st-century institution. They are helping to level the technology playing field for their Spelman sisters."
