Thank You Spelman!

Growing up in Philadelphia, I always loved sitting on my front porch. So, it is no wonder that I immediately fell in love with the front porch of Reynolds Cottage, the president's residence. Like sitting on the porch in West Philly, at Reynolds, I enjoyed a panoramic view of the comings and goings of my community.

Spelman. My community. My family. My home for the past seven years. Now retired, I recall watching from the front porch students, faculty and staff, some of the people who make Spelman so remarkable, and I give thanks.

I give thanks to the early mornings Dr. George and I breakfasted on the porch, watching students striding the campus, books in arms, on their way to class. We often remarked how purposefully they made their way across campus, carrying faith, hope, and determination, along with their books. In seven years, I learned that many students succeeded at Spelman despite insuperable barriers. They succeeded not only because of their will to succeed, but because the classrooms that were their destinations were filled with extraordinary Spelman faculty. I came to learn that our faculty are experts in creating pedagogies that, along with their high expectations and demand for excellence, found ways to harness the determination of those students to lift and challenge them in equal measure. I give thanks to every one of the Spelman faculty whose contributions to the College and to individual students are immeasurable.

Sitting on the Reynolds' porch, Dr. George and I often reveled in the beauty of the College's stately traditions: Founders Day; March Through the Arch;

Baccalaureate. Founders Day was a special favorite. To watch long lines of Black women, graduating seniors, their academic regalia fluttering in the wind, processing to Sisters Chapel, was to witness the fruits of their faith, hope and determination in full bloom. To watch the first year in white attire follow was to witness hope in motion. In four years, they would stand where their Senior Sisters now stood. Class Day and the March Through the Arch was another favorite. Spelman alumnae, dressed in white, on campus for reunion weekend, marched through the arch, starting with the oldest class. Once the alumnae marched, the seniors in their regalia followed, greeted by their sisters on the other side. To see that was to feel the power of the alumnae lineage, a legacy that has extended unbroken over the past 141 years. For the privilege of being part of a college that so eloquently honors generational hope, I am grateful.

Who would have thought in 1881 that the classroom in the sooty basement of Friendship Baptist Church would “stick”? That is what Spelman’s first major patron, John D. Rockefeller asked of the founders, Sophia B. Packard and Harriet E. Giles. Will it stick? The founders believed that Spelman would not only stick but be “second to none.” Rockefeller’s investments led to the naming of the school for the family of his wife, Laura Spelman Rockefeller and, over the lifetime of the College, gifts, large and small, from women and men, young and old in Atlanta and all over the country. Those gifts helped ensure that what began as the Atlanta Baptist Female Seminary and ultimately became Spelman College would “stick.” For their belief in our mission and their support of our students, I am most grateful to all of our donors and friends, who have given so generously to a capital campaign that far exceeded our ambitious goals and did so in record time.

COVID was a blow. The toll it took is still not completely known, but I do know this.

As the world was forced to shelter in place, every day the women and men of Spelman never stopped. Every morning, when our campus was bereft of students, Dr. George and I would go out on the porch, and watch Spelman persevere. Even before we sat down to breakfast in the mornings, we could hear the grounds crew cutting grass and trimming shrubs. Every day we watched facilities and maintenance crews laboring in one or another building, or we waved good morning to the switchboard operator or members of the cleaning staff. Every day the mail center staff sorted and delivered mail and public safety, vigilantly, kept watch over the campus.

THERE ARE ANY NUMBER OF ACCOMPLISHMENTS THAT GIVE ME GREAT PRIDE, BUT WHAT I WILL REMEMBER MOST ABOUT SPELMAN THE SENSE THAT THIS IS MY COMMUNITY, MY FAMILY, MY HOME.

Invisible to us were countless others. Beyond the porch, Spelman kept working. Faculty kept teaching, while our deans kept providing academic advice. Our healthcare counselors responded to more students seeking help for mental distress. Though they did not come to work in person, our financial aid counselors were still helping students find ways to keep going; advancement kept powering forward and, admissions grew even busier. Purchasing was still at work, while budget kept us financially sound, and the endowment office took the endowment to new highs. STS became the heartbeat of our community, ever more critical to keeping a campus working remotely connected as a community. I cannot thank all of you enough. And our energetic communications team kept us connected as a community.

Some people say you don't really get to know someone until you see them through a crisis. During the COVID crisis, I really got to know Spelman. This is a community that rises to the occasion and rises with compassion. This is a community that, like the students we serve, when faced with seemingly insurmountable barriers, can marshal unfathomable reserves of resolve and faith. Resolve and faith enabled Spelman to continue to offer a liberal arts education, second to none, even as we took the time to look after each other and care for each other.

In our last days on Reynolds' porch, Dr. George and I often reminisced about the past seven years. There are any number of accomplishments that give me great pride, but what I will remember most about Spelman the sense that this is my community, my family, my home. I give thanks to the wisdom, dedication to Spelman and generosity of the Spelman College Board of Trustees. How lucky I was to benefit from the leadership of a magnificent board chair in the person of Roz Brewer, C'84, CEO of Walgreen's Boots Alliance. She led a board of trustees who never once waived in its devotion to the College. Their excellence is matched only by the best senior leadership team a college president could possibly ask for. Arm in arm, shoulder to shoulder, we walked many a bridge over troubled waters and, with the mighty teams that each senior team member led, propelled the College to new heights. Last but certainly not least, I have had the good fortune to work with a President's Office Team that is as caring as it is demanding of excellence, as patient and meticulous as they are warm and hospitable. They have been invaluable. The board, the senior team, their respective teams, the office of the president — all have my deepest appreciation.

On June 30, 2022, I will hand the keys to Reynolds Cottage to Spelman's extraordinary 11th president, Dr. Helene Gayle. A gifted leader, accomplished scholar, medical doctor, humanitarian and philanthropist, Dr. Gayle will find new pathways to take Spelman even higher.

Dr. Gayle, I hope that you and your spouse, Dr. Steven Keith, derive immense pleasure, as did we, from sitting on the Reynolds front porch.

To all, again, many thanks.

Keep the faith,

Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D.

ADJUSTING THE APERTURE

New Spelman Museum Director Widens the Lens on the Arts, Social Justice and Politics

BY RENITA MATHIS

Music was always playing in the Denver childhood home of Liz Andrews, Ph.D., and excursions to see the Cleo Parker Robinson Dance Ensemble and the Denver Art Museum were commonplace. However, it was justice and civil rights meld into music, dance and all things art that would ultimately lead Andrews to her current position at Spelman College as the executive director of the Spelman College Museum of Fine Art.

The daughter of a civil rights attorney and a legal secretary, Andrews figured she might pursue law. Her father spurned the idea. Thus, the juxtaposition of social justice and art led Andrews' college studies and career path.

"I felt like art was a creative way to make people think differently," said Andrews, who was named to the Spelman position July 2021, the 25th anniversary of the museum. This is after the museum's long-time director, Andrea Barnwell Brownlee, C'93, was chosen to head the Cummer Museum in Jacksonville, Florida.

"There is always a soundtrack to movements and the visual arts, so I am a singer and performance artist," Andrews explained.

'SILVER LININGS' CELEBRATES SOME OF THE GREATEST ARTISTS IN THE 21ST CENTURY

BY ANGELA JOHNSON

"Silver Linings: Celebrating the Spelman Art Collection" highlights the works of masters, pioneers and trailblazers who anchor this newest exhibition of the Spelman College Museum of Fine Art through June 30, 2022. Featuring 40 works from approximately 450 pieces in the permanent collection, the exhibition includes works from some of the greatest artists in the 21st century.

Some of the works include sculptures by Nancy Elizabeth Prophet and Beverly Buchanan, paintings by Nellie Mae Rowe and Henry Ossawa Tanner, drawings by Charles White, photographs by Myra Greene and Lorna Simpson, and collage/mixed media work by Romare Bearden.

Museum executive director Liz Andrews, Ph.D., (see her story on page 6) can't stop raving about the Spelman art collection in general, which the College had the foresight to begin in 1899. But she describes "Silver Linings" as "celebrating the work that has been put in by Spelman College to uplift artists even before there was a museum" and as having a wide appeal.

"[It's] art history 101 in a lot of ways," she said. "We've got photography, sculpture, painting and mixed media. There are several different kinds of art you'll see here. The oldest work in the show is by Henry Ossawa Tanner that is an incredible piece. These are all artists you hear about, and you read about and they're here in this collection."

A new work by Carrie Mae Weems that arrived from New York in time for the exhibition greets visitors at the entrance. Situated directly across from the title wall, Weems' work sets the stage for the exhibition and prepares patrons to receive the bounty of rich visuals to come.

According to Andrews, a piece called "Color: Real and Imagined," created in 2014, recently arrived, as well as four works by Lina Iris Viktor.

Viktor is a British-Liberian painter whose work Andrews is proud to have as part of the collection. The New York Times called Viktor's paintings "queenly self-portraits with a futuristic edge."

Acknowledging the museum's mission revolves around women artists of the African diaspora, Andrews said the curatorial process also included "thinking about what students would want to see right now."

"So, for example, there's a work by Renee Cox from 1994 called 'Hottentot Venus' that is a self-portrait, remixed representation of Sarah Baartman," she said.

Baartman was a South African Black woman who was showcased and exploited because of her physical appearance. Cox's self-portrait is a strong statement about the racism that ravaged Baartman's existence.

Andrews believes "Silver Linings" is a presentation of some of the strongest works of the 20th and 21st century masters.

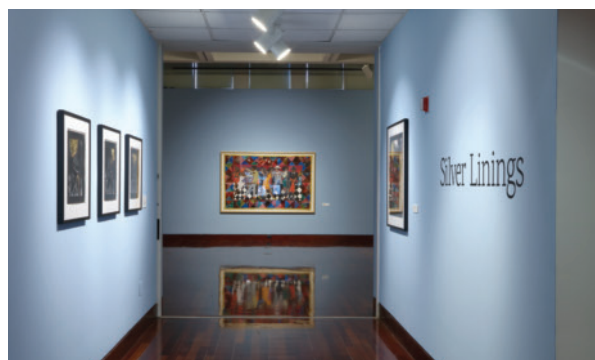

"Within the galleries, there are lots of wonderful Black women and men artists — where a quilt from Faith Ringgold sits beautifully in conversation with the Elizabeth Catlett [sculpture], or the Bearden (collage) in the gallery right next door," she said.

As a teaching museum, it was important to showcase the works of Spelman faculty like Myra Greene, head of the Art and Visual Culture Department.

"I think one of the most powerful moments in the show is the viewing room that is entirely dedicated to Greene's ambrotypes," said Andrews. "With this, I want to show that you can exhibit old photography in safe ways that are beautiful."

SPELMAN'S SOCIAL JUSTICE FELLOWS PROGRAM PREPARES STUDENTS TO CHANGE THE WORLD

BY CONNIE GREEN FREIGHTMAN

The lobby of Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial Hall features an eye-catching timeline collage honoring Spelman College's history of activism from the College's founding to the present.

The hall is home to the Social Justice Fellows Program, which recently marked its 10th anniversary. The expansive, photographic mural is a symbol of pride and inspiration to hundreds of budding scholar-activists.

"The mural was designed so that every time our students pass it, they see the women activists who have come before them and women who are still here doing social justice work," said Cynthia Neal Spence, Ph.D., C'78, associate professor of sociology and founding director of the Social Justice Fellows Program. "It is a space devoted to the development of scholar-activists who wish to make a difference in the world."

Spence launched the Social Justice Fellows Program in fall 2011. The program's framework was inspired by the Spelman tagline: "A Choice to Change the World," which was introduced during the administration of former Spelman president Beverly Daniel Tatum, Ph.D.

The program creates a space for students to explore and interrogate how individuals historically and contemporarily bring about change at the social, political and legal, and policy levels nationally and globally. Fellows are selected annually as rising juniors and continue in the program through their senior year. They receive semester stipends and participate in social justice advocacy internships, monthly colloquia experiences, book discussions, and social entrepreneurship projects. They represent various academic disciplines and receive faculty and alumnae mentorship in their social justice area of interest.

"I see the program as a way to augment the work that students do in community service, because Spelman also has a strong history of community service," Spence said. "But I thought it was important for students to begin to focus on what's happening on the social and political structural levels that require such a great need for community service and civic engagement. And so, the Social Justice Fellows Program was founded to help students merge their intellectual interests with their social justice passions."

In response to high student interest and limited funding, an associates cohort was added that offers no stipends, but allows more student participation in programming, such as book discussions and internships.

The program serves up to 15 fellows and 50 associates annually. Since its inception, about 400 students have participated as fellows or associates. Currently, the program is 98% grant-funded, which requires constant grant-writing to sustain it. Still, Spence remains optimistic. She hopes the program will gain enough funding to become financially institutionalized and self-sustaining.

In the meantime, like Spelman women before them, social justice fellows are leaving a legacy of advocacy. To ensure initiatives continue after they graduate, they create succession plans to prepare other students to keep the projects going.

Ongoing projects include the Blue Record podcast, which pays homage to the Red Record by journalist and activist Ida B. Wells. Another social justice initiative, the Quarterman & Keller Social Justice Scholars, focuses on local and national discussions about reparations. The project brings together

Atlanta University Center students who collect oral histories and engage in racial healing work with descendants of an enslaved family (the Quartermans) and descendants of their enslavers (the Kellers).

For her part, Tyra Beaman, C'2016, has strived to heal the nation's widening divisions one conversation at a time. The former social justice associate and fellow started Difficult Dialogues: Intercollegiate Discussion on Race, Class and Gender during her sophomore year. Difficult Dialogues began as a pilot program with students from Spelman and Oglethorpe University. It has since spread to include Agnes Scott College, Emory University, Freedom University, and other Atlanta University Center institutions. For Beaman, who majored in international studies at Spelman, Difficult Dialogues informs her current work as a diplomat and her lifelong commitment to social justice advocacy and bridging political divides.

"I would say that during my four years at Spelman, there's nothing I'm more proud of than the Difficult Dialogues program. The impact is bigger than me or the students who are now running the program," said Beaman, a U.S. Foreign Service Officer in Brazil. "The impact is giving young people practical tools they can use when things get tough in the workplace, academic space or at home. They understand that conflict can be resolved by dialogue. To me, there's nothing more precious than that."

Sophia Howard, C'2021, always knew she wanted to attend a college with a strong history of activism and chose Spelman because of its Social Justice Fellows Program. For her social justice project, she founded Unlocked Minds, a prison education program currently in the form of a book club, at the Whitworth Women's Facility in Hartwell, Georgia.

Through internships with the American Civil Liberties Union of Georgia and the Equal Justice Initiative in Montgomery, Alabama, Howard met mentors who helped her develop the program. One of her mentors, Spelman alumna Pamela Winn, C'88, founded the nonprofit RestoreHER, a policy advocacy re-entry organization led by and for justice-involved women of color.

"Social advocacy has been such a backbone of the type of people that Spelman creates and then helps to foster," said Howard, a RestoreHER policy intern who plans to attend law school in the fall. "I know that my intellectual growth, personal growth and career growth would not be what it is if I had not attended Spelman and if I had not been in the Social Justice Program."

Social justice fellow Taylor Dews, C'2022, has been following in the activist footsteps of the student leaders who started Spelman's National Action Network chapter. As the chapter's president, she has focused on strengthening advocacy for the chapter's key initiative: addressing food insecurity, transportation needs and housing insecurity among college students, especially during the pandemic.

"This work isn't something new. There's a legacy of students who experience food insecurity across the nation, especially at colleges and universities," said Dews, who recalled that in 2017 NAN members at Spelman and Morehouse led a hunger strike to draw attention to the problem. "It's a systemic concern at Spelman. I think [addressing these concerns] is the legacy of the National Action Network on campus."

NAN is currently working collaboratively with the Spelman administration on a list of demands to support students in need of food and affordable housing. It also collaborates with the Spelman NAACP chapter, Difficult Dialogues, and the Atlanta Student Movement Takeover. NAN leader and social justice fellow Lauren Nicks, C'2023, created a website to connect students with resources.

In a decade of advocacy work inspired by a mural of trail-blazing women, social justice fellows have forged their own paths to create positive change.

Tyra Beaman, C'2016

Cynthia Neal Spence, Ph.D., C'78

"I think that our social justice work is informed by what has been done before us," said Dews, an anthropology and sociology major who plans to earn a Ph.D. and become an anthropology professor and filmmaker. "Prior to coming to Spelman, I was a social justice warrior in high school. But at Spelman, I was able to frame all of my thoughts and how I viewed the world through an academic lens and a social justice advocacy lens," Dews said. "And with that framing, I think I'll go into the world, keenly aware of the ways I experience oppression, but also the ways I am privileged and can contribute to the world in a generative way."

A MASTER CLASS IN LEADERSHIP

Spelman's 10th president retires, leaving a legacy of growth and grace

BY DONNA WILLIAMS LEWIS, C'79

Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., says coming out of retirement to become president of Spelman was “a calling.” “Every day you go out, and you are surrounded by other people who have also been called to Spelman. You’re working with other people who believe as you believe, who are willing to work every bit as hard, if not harder, than you’re working. It really is quite magical to think that this has been going on for 141 years, that kind of devotion and commitment,” she said.

“I had a rich, full career before coming to Spelman. This was the highlight.” After seven years at Spelman, Campbell will retire at the end of the 2021-22 academic year.

“From the beginning, she was unwavering in her belief that Spelman could and would defy expectations and set in motion plans to improve retention and graduation rates, increase the endowment and promote Spelman’s relevancy and distinctive value,” said Rosalind Brewer, C’84, chair of the Spelman College Board of Trustees. “Her wisdom, wit, humor, intellect and grace will be missed on campus, but I have no doubt that her impact will be felt far into the future.”

SPELMAN ASCENDS

Spelman continues to be ranked by U.S. News and World Report as No. 54 among national liberal arts colleges, up from No. 77 when Campbell started, and maintains a reputation as the nation's leading producer of Black women scientists.

Applications to the College have nearly tripled since Campbell's 2015 arrival, from 5,051 then to 13,600 for the upcoming academic year.

Shortly after her arrival, the College began offering online courses at a discounted rate during summer breaks and now winter breaks, as well. An online program for adult learners called eSpelman has been launched to provide a new revenue stream for the College.

"Spelman Ascends," a capital campaign launched in 2017, exceeded its seven-year stretch goal of $250 million, and, in just four years, generated over $317 million in funding for the College in under five years. The funding success enables Spelman to build its first new academic facility in more than 20 years. The $86 million Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., Center for Innovation & the Arts, slated to open in 2024, is the first campus building to be constructed outside Spelman's gates.

Funding was also secured for upgrading facilities, including the John D. Rockefeller Fine Arts Center. Its renovated theater and supporting areas will be renamed the LaTanya Richardson Jackson and Samuel L. Jackson Performing Arts Center in honor of the legacies of the couple, whose $5 million donation represented the largest single gift to the College from an alumna in Spelman's history.

Spelman's academic profile has been enhanced with five new endowed professorships, and the capital campaign exceeded its $75 million goal for new scholarships, raising $130 million to date.

This funding has fueled a 325% increase in new full scholarships overall. One year at Spelman — including tuition, room, and board without fees — currently costs $43,244.

Meanwhile, Spelman's endowment has grown to more than half a billion dollars, rising from $342 million in 2015 to now about $525 million, according to Dawn Alston, chief financial officer, treasurer, and vice president of business and financial affairs.

"Financially, we've not missed a beat. We've actually thrived, and we've become even stronger. To have someone who can lead the institution in that situation and make it stronger, that's really a testament to her leadership skills," said Jessie Brooks, senior vice president for institutional advancement.

Campbell's leadership is as much a part of her legacy as her visible accomplishments, many say.

She has won trust, respect, and admiration for her steady-handed, holistic guidance of Spelman. She has garnered a reputation for being thoughtful, strategic, devoted, supportive and unflappable through every challenge she's faced — from the pandemic and the recent spate of bomb threats against the College to the occasional student protests that come with the territory at an institution with a long-standing tradition of activism.

CAMPBELL'S PATH TO SPELMAN

Campbell's professional career began in 1977 in New York, where she was director of the Studio Museum in Harlem. Under her 10-year leadership, the facility became the first Black fine arts museum accredited by the American Association of Museums.

She then served as commissioner of cultural affairs for New York City under two mayors, and, in 1991, she became dean of New York University's renowned Tisch School of the Arts, serving there for 23 years.

In 2009, President Barack Obama appointed Campbell as vice chair of the President's Committee on the Arts and Humanities.

She took her first walk on Spelman's campus in 2014, when her predecessor, Beverly Daniel Tatum, Ph.D., invited her to the campus to consult on the feasibility of a new arts facility, which is now the burgeoning Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., Center for Innovation & the Arts.

Shortly after that visit, a recruiter asked Campbell to consider becoming a candidate to replace the retiring Tatum.

"I immediately said, 'No,' because in my mind I was retired," Campbell recalled.

She also had a good idea of what could be in store for her because she had been a college president's wife. Her husband, physicist George Campbell Jr., Ph.D., was president of The Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art in New York City for 11 years.

However, the recruiter was persistent, and Campbell finally agreed to make a pit stop during a road trip from New York to Montana to meet with the "huge" search committee of trustees, faculty, students and community members.

Deeply stirred by their stories of what brought them to Spelman, Campbell soon made her place among them, bringing experience not only from a Black institution, but also from an all-female environment.

"She came in talking about how we improve our work and how we work to sustain and build on successes. ...I think she's also taught us to dream big and work toward that ideal every day and that's what Spelman is all about," interim Provost Dolores Bradley Brennan, Ph.D., said. "Spelman is a place that was built for President Campbell. 'It's been a great honor and a privilege to work this closely with her. She is a master class in leadership.'"

THE IRONY OF A SCHOOL FOR WOMEN

A Philadelphia native, she graduated from the Philadelphia High School for Girls, one of the nation's first public schools for women.

"Fun fact," she said, in her characteristic way, before sharing the names of some other notable alumnae of the school, including former Atlanta Mayor Shirley Franklin and Isabel Stewart, the wife of Donald M. Stewart, Spelman's sixth president.

She is praised for the way she has positioned Spelman on the national stage for supporters and potential donors, and for her persistence in making sure they understand the College's unique significance.

"There is no place else in this country where you will find the Black woman so securely at the center of a universe designed for her, and there are over 2,000 of us," Campbell said. "Everything has been designed for her — every course, every faculty who has been chosen, every co-curricular activity, every leadership opportunity, every internship."

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

Morehouse College President David A. Thomas, Ph.D., said the Atlanta University Center Consortium has a stronger collaboration today than in several generations thanks to Campbell's "wisdom and leadership, and her commitment to the idea that we are stronger together."

Spelman has partnered with other AUCC colleges for an undergrad program in art history and curatorial studies, and for a data science initiative that prepares students to meet the growing demand for data scientists and data analytics experts.

Last year, Spelman and Morehouse jointly launched the Center for Black Entrepreneurship with a $10 million grant from Bank of America. The first-ever academic center designed to empower Black entrepreneurial talent is located on the campuses of both colleges.

Spelman also has extended its reach into the West End community, with more than 100 students tutoring public school students in reading and math.

Thomas has come to know Campbell well through weekly meetings of the Council of Presidents of AUCC, which she chairs.

"She's an academic leader who remains a scholar. Mary has also been a leader in the city of Atlanta," Thomas said, ticking off the lengthy list of civic, business, and higher education boards and committees on which she serves.

Campbell is also a prolific writer who received the 2018 Hooks National Book Award for her book, An American Odyssey: The Life and Work of Romare Bearden. She received the Medal of Distinction from The American Academy in Rome at its 2021 New York Gala for advancing the arts and humanities.

Thomas claimed to know the secret to how she does it all.

"When you wake up swimming, that makes it easy for you to swim laps around other people," he said of Campbell, who takes regular swims at the campus Wellness Center.

Campbell also enjoys skiing. She and her husband, who have three sons and eight grandchildren, learned to ski when she was 46 and he was 48. Their love for the sport and trips to the Sundance Film Festival led them to explore the Northwest, where they found their second home, a house on the side of a hill in Big Sky, Montana. They plan to divide their time between that home and their home in Harlem.

"My husband of 53 years and I agreed that I would say 'no' to everything in the first year, so I could make a kind of clean break, pause and have some reflection time and really think about what I want to do with the next chapter of my life," she said.

As for Spelman's future, she hopes the College will continue to push toward a 100% graduation rate.

"It means that we keep discovering all the things we can do to support our students as they're going through this journey and removing as many barriers as possible so that they can get there without crippling debt."

According to Campbell, Spelman's six-year graduation rate is 76%, about 30 percentage points higher than the national average for Black students.

"While that's really impressive, our students leave with too much debt. Our goal was not only to get more scholarship aid for students, but to provide ways to make College more affordable," she said.

Her advice for her successor, Helene Gayle, M.D., is to listen to all the College's stakeholders.

"A college is a complicated place because there are many stakeholders — the faculty, the students, the staff, the parents, alumnae, trustees and donors. All of these people feel they have a real stake in Spelman," she said.

"So, you have to listen very carefully because all of this has to become very orchestral. You have to be the conductor. You have to be able to hear that first violin, and you have to be able to hear the tuba. You're doing that all the time, because you want to make something that is beautiful and resonant and has continuity and lifts the spirit."

That is the symphonic leadership of Mary Schmidt Campbell.

A Tribute to President Campbell

BY AYOKA CHENZIRA, PH.D., ON BEHALF OF THE DIVISION OF THE ARTS

On Sept. 5, 2014, I had the responsibility and the pleasure of greeting Dr. Mary Schmidt Campbell at the front gate and escorting her through the halls of Spelman College to tour the arts facilities and engage in conversation about the future of ARTS@Spelman. A fierce champion of the arts, one of the country's leading arts educators, and a recognized trailblazer in higher education, she visited the campus as a consultant to evaluate our arts programs, a task inspired by a plan from the previous administration. Neither of us knew at the time she would begin her tenure as the 10th president of Spelman College in less than one year and that it would represent a historic new chapter in Spelman's life and that of the AUC and the Atlanta community.

What doesn't happen in a year happens in a day. This saying comes to mind as seemingly overnight ARTS@Spelman was catapulted into new possibilities. When President Campbell took the helm of the College, she invited a group of faculty to form an ARTS@Spelman steering committee, which I chaired as the division chair for the arts. The committee was composed of arts, humanities and science faculty. The task was to author a white paper, and present it to the Spelman faculty for comment and review. Later, a retreat with arts faculty and additional meetings confirmed the direction for each of the arts disciplines and, more broadly, established a bold vision for the Division of the Arts. That vision is to be the leading place for creative invention inspired by the historical and contemporary thought, research, and practice of Black women, informed by the humanities and technology and reaching into the global sphere.

While inward facing discussions were taking place on campus, President Campbell knew how important it was to see best practices in motion and engage with artists. She escorted over 30 students and faculty to New York to see Lin Manuel Miranda's production of Hamilton on Broadway followed by a private Q&A with the cast. We visited the world-renowned Public Theater where Miranda developed the play and dined with Ron Chernow, the author of the book that serves as the basis of the play. The impact of those public-facing conversations will be remembered for years to come.

Ayoka Chenzira

Understanding the value of artists both inside and outside of the academy, President Campbell provided resources to bring distinguished professors and other accomplished guest artists to teach courses or provide workshops at Spelman. In addition, she encouraged the development of new disciplines, resulting in documentary filmmaking, photography, and interactive media programs. Her tireless efforts to address the lack of Black participation in museum leadership resulted in a major gift, which included scholarships, to establish the AUC Art History + Curatorial Studies. Here, students learn from world-renowned art historians, curators, and museum professionals. Undoubtedly, the next generation of our emerging scholars will significantly influence the art world.

Acknowledging our desire for growth and the critical need for resources, President Campbell challenged the Division of the Arts faculty to develop our guiding principles, and establish strategies for collaboration.

Early in her tenure, President Campbell arranged a partnership with New York University's Interactive Telecommunications Program, where each summer several Spelman arts faculty live in a NYU dorm for four weeks to learn about art and technology and engage with other faculty and students from diverse disciplines.

Simultaneously, she established the Spelman College Innovation Lab that engages the intersections of art, science, technology and engineering. From its humble beginnings in two rooms of the Rockefeller Arts Building, the Innovation Lab has since expanded and is now established as a nationally recognized campuswide resource where the Spelman community can engage in creative inquiry and real-world problem-solving with technology.

The departments that comprise ARTS@Spelman are currently scattered around campus but will soon have permanent spaces. The renovated Rockefeller Arts Building will house the new LaTanya Richardson Jackson and Samuel L. Jackson Performing Arts Center and serve as the home for the Department of Theater & Performance beginning fall 2023

On April 29, the College began construction of the Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., Center for Innovation & the Arts (see page 20). Built for a community of innovators, creative risktakers, collaborators, artists and scientists, it was designed by Jeanne Gang, an award-winning world-class architect, with guiding input from Dr. Campbell, faculty and student representatives. The facility is historic. It will gather the arts into one space for the first time, and it will be the new public face of the College as the first forward-facing building on campus, the Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., Center for Innovation & the Arts will welcome the Atlanta community via its front porch.

Through President Campbell's visionary leadership, the Division of the Arts found bold new ways of expression. She championed the idea that the arts are vital and represent another way of thinking about and contributing to the world. Her commitment to faculty, staff, and students created a rich and affirming learning environment.

I am deeply proud to have had an opportunity to work with and learn from such an extraordinary, courageous, fierce, compassionate spirit who is an exemplary leader. My work with President

Campbell is the highlight of my professional life as an educator. As she retires from Spelman College, she leaves a powerful legacy, her gift to future generations who will know through her work that they too were at the forefront of her imagination.

A Fond Farewell to 'Our Hamiltonian Prez'

President Campbell,

At your inauguration, I told you we (the faculty) had been looking for a mind at work, that in you we were more than satisfied, and I reminded you to remember from there on out, that history had its eyes on you. Fast forward to today: you are yielding your power and stepping away.... Today, we find ourselves doing something we are reluctant to do, but once again we are learning from you, as you teach us how to say goodbye, cherish your legacy, and move on carrying forward the story of your time with us as our 10th president.

So, let's "Rewind" and examine the historical record... As we look back upon your time as president of Spelman College, we realize three fundamental truths at the same time (channeling "Hamilton"):

1. You were the model leader, president par excellence
2. You ensured Spelman College was the room where it happened
3. It was the most perfect union

REWIND to No. 1: The Model Leader

You took us to school, put us through our relentless paces, and taught us our ABCs anew – the MSC Campbell's Alphabet Stew – A through Z, from Awesome wow to Zealous to the Nth.

REWIND to No. 2: You put us in the room where it happened: (views from the Division Chairs)

(From Dr. Pavri): ... We have always remained impressed at the speed with which you responded personally to emails (because we know your inbox probably remained flooded at all times) and how invested (and just how good!) you were in providing the presidential heft in programs such as the CPI, which required your informed presence at meetings over the years.... We were indeed lucky to have had your leadership.

(From Dr. Winfield): You established a strategic plan that was timely and unabashed about celebrating Spelman's vast accomplishments, lifting them as a mantle for all to emulate. You set an ambitious capital campaign and pursued fundraising goals with unquenchable energy....

(From Dr. Chenzira): ...The emphasis on cross-campus collaboration resulted in the establishment of the Spelman College Innovation Lab that engages the intersections of art, science, technology and engineering. From its humble beginnings in two rooms of the Rockefeller Arts building, has become a nationally recognized, campus-wide resource where the Spelman community can engage in creative inquiry and real-world problem solving with the use of technology....

(From Dr. KPL): ...You championed bold strides forward in STEM, technology, data science, digital humanities, innovations in the arts, global education, student success, women gender and sexuality studies.... You stood firm against the naysayers in adopting our forward-looking transgender policy....

REWIND to #3: It was indeed the most perfect union

That fact was proven, above all, when the pandemic hit. You steered us safely through the covid crisis. ... When we wanted to hesitate and retreat, you plunged ahead armed and armored with courage, clarity, and conviction.... You expertly calculated the element of risk involved in pressing ahead with the appropriately named PATH FORWARD initiative..., and we won.

...We assure you that we will continue to nurture the seeds you planted, protect your legacy, and tell your story. We will cherish and continue to build upon this strong foundation that you laid, even as you enjoy your moment in the shade.... Thank you for all your service!... You got the job done!...

(Dr. KPL on behalf of the faculty and the Council of Chairs to our Hamiltonian Prez.) (An excerpted letter)

ELEVATING OUR COMMUNITY TO EXCELLENCE

BY DAVID A. THOMAS, PH.D.

The bond between Spelman and Morehouse is among the strongest connections between colleges anywhere in the world, which makes partnership between presidents indispensable to our collective success.

In President Mary Schmidt Campbell, I have found a collaborator, confidant and friend. Together, we have envisioned intercollegiate programming on the cutting edge of entrepreneurship, culture and technology, which will position students of both institutions to be among the most prepared in the world.

As a fellow president, I have benefited from Dr. Campbell's decades of expertise, professionalism, intellectual insight, and student-centered leadership philosophies. As a colleague, I have appreciated her authenticity, compassion and unpretentious confidence. Just as important, I have watched her assume the national stage with courage, serving as a champion of equity, opportunity and justice.

Dr. Campbell takes the needs of just one of her students as seriously as she does the needs of all of her students. She nurtures their growth as leaders, scholars and intellectuals, even as she sees clearly their humanity, their talent and their promise.

She has been a relentless force of excellence within the Atlanta University Center Consortium, singularly driving many of the innovative initiatives that have benefited all member institutions. She has uniquely built and leveraged relationships, both local and global, to engender a rare kind of trust and goodwill that makes the world's most-enterprising leaders invest in her vision. I know her to be at once thoughtful and deliberate, yet also tough and decisive. This is why, under her leadership, an institution at the peak of achievement like Spelman has found even higher heights toward which to rise.

As much as any other quality, I appreciate Dr. Campbell's creativity. Perhaps borne from her diverse experience as a scholar in literature, the arts and the humanities — combined with experience as an administrator and executive — she daily demonstrates extraordinarily innovative thought leadership and invention.

Throughout her career, her gift has been empowering cultural, intellectual and civic expression. As a leader, she creates environments that allow ideas to take root, and then helps cultivate them until they grow and blossom. As an influencer, she pushes others to think deeply and critically and to solve challenges through collaborative ingenuity. As an intellectual, she leads by example, pushing the boundaries of contemporary knowledge to examine new possibilities. As a humanitarian, she looks for ways to make life better right here in the AUC community, but also in the world at large.

The blessings and good fortune we wish for Dr. Campbell as she moves forward to her next great endeavor are far from obligatory rhetoric. On the contrary, they are reciprocation. Because of her leadership, students at Spelman, Morehouse and the other AUC institutions will be blessed with the good fortune of increased resources, enhanced programming, and expanded opportunity that are her legacy. Her contributions have been invaluable, and the trail she has blazed will inspire generations that will continue to affect global change for the foreseeable future.

Morehouse College's faculty, staff, students, and supporters know that our community has been elevated because of Dr. Campbell's work and passion to improve the lives of others. We are forever grateful and wish her Godspeed.

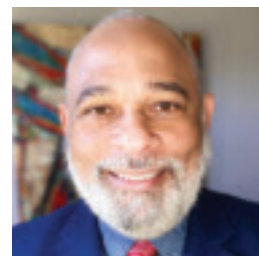

David A. Thomas, Ph.D., is president of Morehouse College.

SHAPING MY DAUGHTERS INTO WOMEN OF CONSEQUENCE

BY MICHAEL HODGE, PH.D.

It is my honor to say a few words about Dr. Mary Schmidt Campbell as she prepares to leave the presidency of Spelman College to take on the next challenge of her journey.

I could write about the many accomplishments of Dr. Campbell, a woman of consequence, for the Atlanta University Center Consortium and its member institutions. I could write about how she ushered in a new major and minor in art history and curatorial studies — not just for Spelman, but for the entire AUC community. Or, how she leveraged great relationships to provide funding for faculty development across the AUC. I can even write about the breaking of ground for a new arts and innovation building that will be a place of engagement for students, faculty, staff, and the metropolitan Atlanta community. Professionally, I could write about the ways she has inspired and coached me to be better in my role as a provost and now as the executive director of the AUCC. All these things are tremendous and wonderful accomplishments.

But she is more significant to me for two major reasons: my daughters. Dr. Campbell began her tenure with my older daughter and concludes her time as my younger daughter graduates. Her direct words of encouragement to my daughters and her model of leadership and service (always with an artistic flair) set a foundation for my daughters to be women of consequence who are choosing to change the world.

Best wishes, President Campbell.

Michael Hodge, Ph.D., is executive director of the Atlanta University Center Consortium Inc. and dad to Morgan and Meagan.

BROADENING THE 'CIRCLE OF THE FAITHFUL'

BY ROSALIND 'ROZ' BREWER, C'84

It gives me great joy to express my admiration for President Campbell and convey my gratitude for the contributions she has made to Spelman College and the community it serves.

The Spelman College Board of Trustees carries the weighty responsibility of ensuring the fulfillment of the College's mission through careful oversight of institutional assets and strategies that enable relevancy and success for generations to come. This, of course, requires delegating key duties to the president for day-to-day operations; chief among them is safeguarding and strengthening Spelman's model of shared governance. This makes selecting a president one of the most impactful decisions a board will make to ensure ongoing success for itself and the College.

The appointment of President Campbell as Spelman's 10th president signaled our confidence that her success at managing complex organizations; her unquestionable integrity, distinctive career and devotion to African American life and culture; as well as her passion for mission-centric endeavors prepared her to continue Spelman's legacy of insightful and visionary leadership. I also was personally swayed by what I saw as shared principles and values for courageous, people-centric leadership. In the years following her appointment, my regard for her personal and professional attributes has intensified.

In recent years, innovation, disruption, and complexity have added to President Campbell's depth and breadth of knowledge, skills, and experiences essential for higher education leadership — all of which make her outstanding accomplishments even more remarkable.

President Campbell is a bold visionary. From the beginning, she was unwavering in her belief that Spelman could and would defy expectations and set in motion plans to improve retention and graduation rates, increase the endowment, and promote Spelman's relevancy and distinctive value. She has been a stalwart champion of our many points of pride, while simultaneously pushing us to wrestle with how to honor Spelman's legacy of struggle, equity, love, leadership, and light for a new generation.

In considering the daunting national and global challenges our graduates will face as emerging leaders, she has inspired us to "take risks, make mistakes, fail and create the unimaginable." Her willingness to lead by example is what I admire most. She took risks, celebrating the wins and course-correcting when necessary. She owned her mistakes publicly and gave her team the space to fail. As a result, we are building our first full academic facility in 20 years — the Science Center was dedicated in 2002. We are rising among the ranks of U.S. campuses recognized for the most innovative, enhancing technology and entrepreneurial-focused curricular and extracurricular opportunities. We are meeting critical needs for a diverse and inclusive workforce and increasing access to our award-winning faculty and education.

During her time as president, Dr. Campbell has broadened Spelman supporters into what she dubbed the "circle of the faithful." I am certain that she has also broadened her personal circle of lifelong friends and supporters. Her wisdom, wit, humor, intellect, and grace will be missed on campus, but I have no doubt that her impact will be felt far into the future. I know she will continue to make contributions to society through her volunteer activities, and I cherish the knowledge that our friendship will endure.

"Oh God, forever bind our hearts to thine."

Rosalind "Roz" Brewer, C'84, is CEO of Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc., and chair of the Spelman College Board of Trustees.

SPELMAN IS IN PRESIDENT SCHMIDT CAMPBELL'S MIND AND SOUL

BY PRESIDENT FREEMAN A. HRABOWSKI III, PH.D.

I met Mary Schmidt Campbell in 2001 when we were among a handful of African Americans being inducted into the American Academy of Arts and Sciences at Harvard University. I watched as she and Quincy Jones signed the Academy's Book of Members, which contains signatures going back to President John Adams and other founders. It was a special moment, and I remember asking who she was and learning she was the dean of NYU's Tisch School of the Arts. My wife, Jackie, and I were truly inspired, both on that day and as we learned of her many achievements.

Years later, Mary was nominated to become the first Black woman on the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation board, and I remember as other board members started to sing her praises. It was clear that I did not need to say much because she was already regarded with such deep admiration. Serving with her on that board, I was moved on countless occasions by her approach in making important points about the arts, the connections between the arts and sciences, and the need for greater representation at all levels of our society. She combines passion and insight with wisdom and humility.

Having been close to Spelman presidents Johnnetta Cole and Beverly Tatum and having been honored to have received an honorary degree from Spelman in 2013, I could not have been more thrilled or impressed when Mary told me she was being considered for the Spelman presidency. I especially enjoyed hearing the excitement in her voice after her first visit there. She was impressed by the mission, the rich history, and the success of Spelman students and alumnae.

In the time since Mary became Spelman's 10th president in 2015, we have had many opportunities to talk about issues and challenges in American higher education. At the University of Maryland, Baltimore County, we take great pride in being among the top producers of African Americans who go on to complete Ph.D.s in the natural sciences and engineering. It won't surprise many that Spelman is the leading producer of Black women who go on to complete these degrees. Equally important, Mary has brought to the institution her own rich relationships and expertise in the arts.

Working with a strong faculty, Mary has been able to take Spelman to the next level in fundraising, strengthening the College, and allowing for new investments in programs and facilities. She also has had the support of her colleagues and a strong board, led by the visionary Rosalind Brewer. Spelman was wise to select Mary as president, and even wiser to support her. At her installation in 2016, I shared the story of another great educator and leader, Mary McLeod Bethune, founder of the Daytona Literary and Industrial Training Institute for Negro Girls, which is now Bethune-Cookman University. To paraphrase Ms. Bethune, Spelman is in President Schmidt Campbell's mind and soul.

Freeman A. Hrabowski III, Ph.D., is president of the University of Maryland, Baltimore County.

MAY YOUR LATTER YEARS BE EVEN GREATER THAN YOUR FORMER YEARS

BY HELGA A. GREENFIELD

It is a joy to share this tribute to Dr. Mary Schmidt Campbell, president of Spelman College. I have had the privilege of serving as her chief of staff since Aug. 10, 2015, soon after she arrived on campus. Dr. Campbell is a stellar leader and a great strategic partner. For nearly seven years, she has led a movement to enhance and expand the reach and continued growth of Spelman College.

Dr. Campbell is a mover and a shaker. She is a force to be reckoned with. I thought I had mastered flexibility until I became her chief of staff. Dr. Campbell gives being flexible a whole new meaning. She may be tiny in frame, but she is tall in courage and character when it comes to moving the agenda forward. It has been rewarding to work with her and to witness the fruit of her labor firsthand.

Dr. Campbell, I am thankful for you. It has been an honor and a privilege to be a part of your leadership team. I pray that abundant peace and purpose will be yours in retirement. May you bask in the joy of time spent with family and friends. May the works of your hands continue to reap meaningful rewards. And may your latter years be even greater than your former years. Amen!

AN EXAMPLE OF SELFLESS SERVICE

BY FANA R. HAILESELASSIE, C'2021

Leadership in the time of COVID-19 and racial injustice is a moral obstacle course – a continuous test of conditions beyond one's control. The task to bring calm amid calamity is an artisanal craft that demands adaptation and compassion alongside experience and connection.

President Campbell's leadership in a period of global distress has proven to be an example of selfless service. I worked alongside her when I assumed my position as the 79th Student Government Association president at the height of the COVID-19 pandemic and our nation's racial reckoning in 2020. Cosmopolitan and community-oriented, the nature of a tenured curator lingers in President Campbell's approach. Never too quick to judge and always eager to observe, our visionary president's ambitions were crafted with the strategic expertise that we all desperately needed in a time of separation and distress. I watched in awe as she defended the concerns of students and local community members while advocating for fields and interests that had been neglected for too long.

Through the Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., Center for Innovation & the Arts, President Campbell's legacy will be permanently embedded into Spelman's community and culture. For this, we express our gratitude and celebrate her accomplishments upon the occasion of a well-earned retirement. Only our beloved hymn can hallmark the occasion of completing such noble work: "May peace with thee abide, and God forever guide, Thy heights supreme and true. Blessings to you."

Fana R. HaileSelassie, C'21, was the 79th Spelman Student Government Association president.

A 'TRUE BLUE' SUPERSTAR

BY JESSIE L. BROOKS

It is amazing how quickly time has flown by. I remember my first interview with Dr. Campbell for my position as vice president of Institutional Advancement in 2016 like it was yesterday. I recall being extremely impressed with her passion for Spelman College and her staunch desire to continue building a strong foundation for future graduates leaving its gates.

I have had the honor of working closely with Dr. Campbell over the past five-plus years and witnessing her dedication and commitment to launching, executing, and implementing a historic comprehensive campaign for student scholarships, innovative academic programs, endowed professorships, and unrestricted support for students.

Dr. Campbell has helped increase our overall endowment to new highs and secured funding for the new Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., Center for Innovation & the Arts, to name a few of her achievements. Her numerous contributions to the College will be a part of the rich history and legacy of Spelman College presidents.

Dr. Campbell has been a valued mentor, adviser, strategist, and role model for me. I sincerely appreciate her steadfast support to the Division of Institutional Advancement for our engagement and outreach initiatives. Without her trust, guidance, and unwavering commitment to our efforts, none of our successes would have been possible. She is definitely a "true blue" superstar in our eyes. We wish her much success as she enters a new chapter in her life and know that our paths will continue to cross in the future.

Good luck, Dr. Campbell.

Jessie L. Brooks is senior vice president of Institutional Advancement.

Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., Center for Innovation & the Arts

New Facility Aims to Connect Community, Spark Creativity and Inspire Interdisciplinary Collaboration

BY CONNIE GREEN FREIGHTMAN

Spelman College is building a striking new building and front porch to the community at Westview Drive and Lee Street. The new Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., Center for Innovation & the Arts is slated to open in 2024.

The center will bring together arts departments now scattered across the Spelman campus into a collaborative community of innovators, artists and scientists.

“We deliberately approached the design to break down academic silos to create a flow of traffic from the main campus to the CI&A. This flow will encourage opportunities for interdisciplinary encounters,” said President Mary Schmidt Campbell, Ph.D., the eponymous visionary for the center. “This is the spirit of Spelman, the spirit of the contemporary liberal arts college and the spirit of 21st-century innovation.”

The new learning environment will support the College’s strategic pillar to foster academic innovation by integrating art, technology, community engagement and leadership opportunities.

One of the center’s key features will be the “Front Porch,” a historical and cultural symbol of hospitality and social interaction that will link the College to Atlanta’s West End community.

Located on the ground floor and facing a public plaza, the porch will invite the community into a dance performance studio, a high-tech digital black box theater, a café/retail outlet, and a second gallery for the Spelman College Museum of Fine Art.

Inspired by Campbell’s childhood memories of family porch gatherings in her hometown of Philadelphia and her grandparents’ home in Amelia, Virginia, the front porch feature was a must-have.

“I wanted to capture that welcoming, community gathering spirit,” she said.

The central hub of the 84,000-square-foot building will be the Forum. This open, two-story space will house the Arthur M. Blank Innovation Lab, a collection of maker spaces, digital media and gaming labs, and co-curricular activities for the Center for Black Entrepreneurship.

“The Forum is envisioned as a place where all members of our community, regardless of academic discipline, can gather to collaborate and innovate,” said Art Frazier, Spelman director of Facilities Management and Services.

Surrounding the Forum will be the three-level Hive, a multi-zoned area threaded with flexible spaces devised to enhance learning, teaching, rehearsals, performances, and exchanging ideas across disciplines. The Hive will house classrooms, offices, a conference center, and a roof terrace.

STEAM (science, technology, engineering, arts and math) is the center's core design principle. The facility builds on Spelman's long-standing strength in STEM and award-winning programs in visual arts, art history, curatorial studies, photography, documentary filmmaking, dance, theater and music.

It also represents a cultural shift at Spelman, said Jade Lockard, C'2020, who discovered a passion for tech start-ups after her team won the first Spelpreneur 10-day Startup Competition in 2018. The education studies major now supports HBCU entrepreneurship as the program director for Nex Cubed's HBCU Founders Initiative.

"Spelman students and alumnae have a long history of pursuing entrepreneurship. Establishing a dedicated, on-campus space will further nurture innovation, enabling even more business development and creativity," Lockard said. "This is the future. The future of Spelman is students having a community and designated multidisciplinary space to create, develop and foster tech and innovation ideas."

In keeping with Spelman's commitment to sustainability, the College hopes to install a stormwater retention-and-reuse system at the site. Spelman students developed the plan for the system with the nonprofit environmental group ECO-Action.

If funded, the system would reduce flow into the Proctor Creek Watershed, conserve water and save money, Frazier said.

Studio Gang, an award-winning, women-led architecture firm based in Chicago and New York, designed the center in partnership with Atlanta minority firm Goode Van Slyke. Turner Construction will build the four-story structure.

Fundraising has exceeded the $86 million. Groundbreaking was April 29, 2022.

In December 2018, the center received its largest contribution – a $30 million gift from Spelman College trustee Ronda Stryker and spouse William Johnston.

Other major donations include a $12 million gift from the Lettie Pate Evans Foundation and a $10 million grant from the Arthur M. Blank Family Foundation to establish the Arthur M. Blank Innovation Lab, now known as the Spelman Innovation Lab. The College also has received significant gifts from many other donors to make this facility a reality.

Darnita Killian, Ed.D., C'79, former vice president for student affairs at Spelman, is among the alumnae donors to the center. Her gift was a "natural outgrowth" of a Spelman scholarship she started in memory of her mother, Darlyne Atkinson Killian, C'48, who majored in art and history at Spelman and taught art in the Atlanta Public Schools.

Now she looks forward to seeing the "shiny new building on the corner, standing like a beacon."

"I am so excited about the new center. I am very proud of Spelman and the evolution of Spelman over 141 years of teaching women to be global leaders," said Killian, who majored in economics at Spelman and whose family legacy includes 16 Spelmanites. "Spelman is already an excellent institution. For future generations, the cutting-edge art and technology at this center will lead to even more excellence."

EDUCATED, EMPOWERED AGENTS OF CHANGE

Spelman alumnae who are exercising their choice to change the world are doing so in varied sectors of society. This issue of the Spelman Messenger highlights a sampling of these alumnae influencers. From the arts to advocacy, entrepreneurship to entertainment, they are at the top of their game swaying thought, wielding authority, and providing industry insight.

Each, in her own way, is making a difference in the lives of the people, causes and served communities. Importantly, each is carrying on the proud Spelman tradition of smart and courageous women who use their intellect, vision, and passion as forces for good.

While their pathways to excellence are different, their impetus for making their unique contributions is the same. Inspired by Spelman's mission, they build on the bedrock of the academic and social preparation they received at the College to exemplify what it means to be educated and empowered agents of change. — ASH

Autumn Adeigbo: Designing Fashion With a Conscience

BY ADRIENNE S. HARRIS

When Autumn Adeigbo, C'2003, was growing up, her wardrobe consisted of the clothes her Nigerian mother made for her. The creations were so special that in the fourth grade, Adeigbo's classmates voted her "Best Dressed." That accolade sparked her choice of the career path she would follow to make her mark on the world.

"I became inspired to be a fashion designer by watching my mother sew the clothes I wore as a little girl," said Adeigbo. "I knew then that I wanted to create a fashion lifestyle brand with a unique aesthetic."

After graduating from Spelman with a bachelor's degree in economics, Adeigbo earned an associate's degree in fashion design from New York's Parsons School of Design. She developed her fashion line while working days as a fashion assistant and nights as a hostess at New York City hotspots. In 2009, she released her first collection of seven African-inspired dresses, and in 2016, incorporated her brand.

The company's tagline – Culture, Color, Conscience – says as much about how Adeigbo creates and markets her fashion-forward clothing as it does about the clothing itself.

"I want to not only create change for women through our bold, empowering designs, but also through our ethical and sustainable practices," she said. "From sourcing to delivery, we embrace sustainable practices by purchasing in limited quantities and producing only what is ordered, which, in turn, minimizes fabric waste, excessive manufacturing and surplus stock."

As a Black female business owner, Adeigbo is committed to positively impacting the lives of women across cultures. Her company uses female-owned production facilities in the United States and provides global artisans with meaningful employment and fair wages. She recently launched four fair-trade fashion production pilots in Africa.

Adeigbo's business model has attracted investors who appreciate her ethical and eco-friendly approach to fashion design. Her first investor, Christopher Elliott, executive program director of national accounts for TriStruX, started putting capital into the brand in 2017 and continues to support the company.

"When Autumn shared her vision, I thought, 'This isn't just possibly a good investment; this is the right thing to do,'" said Elliott. "Here was someone with a wonderful idea and a great artistic eye who could inspire people to change the way they look at buying clothing."

Despite the pandemic, Adeigbo's business has flourished.

She saw 250% growth in 2020 and 400% growth in 2021. Her customers include Lizzo, Busy Philipps, Amanda Gorman, Zooey Deschanel and other celebrities.

Over the past two years, the company has attracted $4 million in venture capital funding; started retail partnerships with Nordstrom, Bergdorf Goodman and Neiman Marcus; expanded staff in its New York and Los Angeles offices; and launched footwear and handbag fashion categories.

"My vision is to build the Autumn Adeigbo brand into a household name," she said. "But aside from my designs, I want to be remembered for the positive impact my business had on the world around me and on inspiring other young women and women of color to strive for their dreams."

Tai Beauchamp: Using Her Platform to Empower and Uplift Black Women

BY ALICIA SANDS LURRY

Donning a black Spelman baseball cap and black workout apparel, Tai Beauchamp, C'2000, looks straight ahead into the camera, removes her designer sunglasses and proceeds to speak into the lives of her ardent Instagram followers — many of whom rose at the crack of dawn to hear her words of inspiration.

“You cannot give to others what you don’t first give to yourself.... If you’re not depositing first into you, you can’t give it anywhere else. So, give yourself some love today. Give yourself some joy today. Give yourself some energy today, and then add it unto others. Thank you, sis. Have a great day!”

Welcome to “Morning Mindset with Tai,” Beauchamp’s daily Instagram Live series designed to empower, inspire, connect and motivate, all while sending spirits, hearts, and minds off on the right start each morning.

Empowering and uplifting women, especially Black women, is exactly what this Los Angeles-based, award-winning TV host, producer, brand consultant, ambassador, veteran journalist and editor, and serial entrepreneur has committed her life’s work to doing.

USING HER MOST INFLUENTIAL PERSONALITY

Named one of the 50 most influential people in the multicultural market by WWD, Beauchamp is currently expanding her vast platform as chief brand officer of Brown Girl Jane, the first plant-based CBD beauty and wellness collection that centers on the needs of Black and Brown women. Beauchamp co-founded the company in 2020 in partnership with her Spelman sisters Nia Jones, C'2005, and Malaika Jones, C'2001. She oversees brand identity, marketing, partnerships, and product development for the company. Under her leadership, Brown Girl Jane has garnered more than 35 billion media impressions and is projected to earn $2 million in revenue.

A friend, business partner and former classmate, Malaika Jones, has been a fan of Beauchamp’s meteoric rise over the years.

“Tai is as beautiful inside as she is out and has never met a stranger. She’s a true champion of women and has an authentic passion for storytelling, connection and partnership,” said Jones, who describes their partnership as a sisterhood in the truest sense, leveraging the individual superpowers of three dynamic women for the growth and impact of one company.

“She’s bold, creative, thoughtful, and believes in dreaming BIG,” said Jones.

Through her Brown Girl Jane business of wellness, Beauchamp and her Spelman sisters want Black women to be healed and feel whole.

MAKING HER MARK

After graduating from Spelman with a degree in English, Beauchamp launched a successful career as a thought leader and respected beauty, fashion and lifestyle authority. In 2006, she founded Tai Life Media LLC, a media and creative consulting company that partners with global brands across multichannel platforms to develop lifestyle and wellness content. She also worked as an editor at O, The Oprah Magazine and Vibe Vixen, and made history as Seventeen’s first Black and youngest beauty and fitness director.

Despite her work in the magazine industry and extensive experience as a TV host on major networks, Beauchamp longed to connect and have a deeper impact in women’s lives.

Building upon her accomplishments and the foundation she received at Spelman, Beauchamp is committed to connecting women of color. Besides “Morning Mindset with Tai,” she also hosts “Hike + Experience with Tai,” an experience that allows Black women to connect on a physical and emotional level, and she is looking into several TV projects and a book.

In 2020, she created a Black beauty and wellness summit in partnership with Spelman.

“Spelman contributed to me, period. And that is the reason why I am the woman I am today,” she said. “I am a product of my mom, nurtured by my grandparents, and it has helped to cultivate and further nurture and provide a foundation of my appreciation for women, more specifically my love for Black women. My life’s work, I believe, is to help inspire, motivate, and provide a space and platform for Black women to be seen and heard, and for their stories to come to fruition.”

Lynae Bogues: Amplifying Her Voice and Platform to Affirm and Uplift

BY ALICIA SANDS LURRY

When Lynae Vanee Bogues, C'2016, speaks, people listen.

With over 500,000 Instagram followers, Bogues is taking the social media sphere by storm with her profound, often humorous, and undeniably powerful “Parking Lot Pimpin” videos. With her signature teacup in hand, she “spills the tea” and provides fans with a succinct, meticulously researched, and precise dissection of current social, cultural, and political topics that pertain to the Black community.

Using her vast platform, Bogues looks into the camera and addresses the masses while perched on a chair that serves as her pulpit. She starts each segment with her signature catchphrase: “It’s Friday, so imma keep it Black, but imma keep it brief.” Like a preacher, Bogues uses her art as ministry to share her unique gifts, talents, and love of history with Black folks and other followers via posts that have captured the attention of celebrities, major networks, and the general public.

“The work I do with ‘Parking Lot Pimpin’ started out as a project to do something I love consistently, regardless of feedback, praise, interaction and engagement,” said Bogues, proudly donning a Spelman sweatshirt and large pearl earrings, all while exuding an unmistakable poise and confidence of a Spelman woman. “It was something I was specifically doing for me. But now, this work I do is a light for anybody who can identify with it – not just little Black girls and boys, grown men and women, nonbinary or transgender people.

“I want to be a light to any and everybody Black,” added Bogues, an NAACP Image Award nominee who earned her master’s degree in African American studies from Boston University. “Everybody else can look in on and take what they can and will because it’s a gift, but my intention is for the Blacks.”

Unapologetically Black in her attitude and approach to work, Bogues began her career as a high school social studies teacher but soon transitioned to the influencer space after the COVID-19 pandemic hit in 2020. Her love of Black history, combined with her gift for poetry, ultimately led to her passion project.

“The pandemic just made for perfect timing. I couldn’t connect with my kids in a way that I once did, and after seeing the response to George Floyd and Breonna Taylor’s murders, I knew it was time,” said Bogues, who started filming in the parking lot of her former apartment. “I always had the information to share. I wondered, if Black folks knew these things and were taught and affirmed in these ways, where might we be? I wanted to do my part and help share this information, to help affirm and uplift. And the ‘Parking Lot’ is how it all got started.”

With her social media presence fully established, Bogues has bigger projects on the horizon. She’s currently pitching a scripted, digital series planned as an expansion of the “Parking Lot.” Her poetry is featured on Atlanta-based EARTHGANG’s latest album, and in June, she’s hosting a hybrid event featuring spoken-word poetry and a live “Parking Lot” session.

Hoping to follow in her muse’s, Issa Rae, footsteps, Bogues’ sights are firmly set on changing the world. Thanks to Spelman’s imprint, Bogues is well-prepared to meet the challenge.

“Spelman in particular showed me what the world looked like and my propensity to change it,” she said. “As an artist, my content is designed intentionally and purposely to serve others in the realm of representation, inclusivity, and amplification of voices. I’m grateful I can be an example of Spelman taking your gifts and turning them up to 100.”

Marli Crowe: Helping Young Professionals Build Careers and Wardrobes

BY CYNTHIA CARSON, C'84

Marli Crowe, C'2016, knew one month into her senior year she would be moving to Chicago after graduation to work as a data analyst for an advertising agency. For the remainder of her time at Spelman, she frequently helped classmates and friends write résumés, cover letters, and complete applications to support their own future career goals.

While at the Chicago agency, Crowe easily slipped back into a familiar routine as she screened applicants for an open position in her department. "I posted on social media that I was hiring, and people were sending in their résumés, and they weren't great," she recounted. "I would tell them, 'I'm not forwarding this to my boss, but I'll redo your resume.'"

After two years, in 2018, Crowe returned to Atlanta, initially working for a couple of companies, including Home Depot, but soon, working for her sister's tech start-up, GoodR, a food waste-management company. Crowe worked as a project manager at GoodR while also launching her own Crowe Career Services/C. Suite, a career development company specializing in résumé and cover letter revision, LinkedIn optimization, interview prep and career consultation.

Crowe's clients immediately began asking where they could find affordable, fashionable clothing for job interviews and the workplace.

This prompted her to introduce a weekly post on the company's Instagram page, Work Wear Wednesday, featuring reasonably priced and stylish work attire.

"I noticed her posts at a time when I was regularly traveling for my job," C. Suite customer Alexis Dulan, C'2016, recalled. "They served as a guide for how to pack my bag – taking a jacket and one skirt and pairing it with different items so I didn't have to pack eight different outfits."

A self-described fashionista, Crowe, who was an economics major at Spelman, realized an opportunity to combine her love of fashion with her business interests. This is how the idea for C. Suite, an online retailer offering affordable and trendy work wear for young professional women, was conceived.

Crowe performed the market research and in December 2019 opened C. Suite.

"It took time," she said. "I had to learn everything. I had to locate vendors, build a website and determine how I was going to afford it. I was essentially using CCS to fund C. Suite."

In 2022, Crowe merged the businesses, which now operate as C. Suite.

"I don't know if there is another company out there where someone can grab a résumé and an outfit for work – in one place," she said. C. Suite customers, on average, are young professionals in the early stages of their careers. According to a report from the National Association of Colleges and Employers, the median starting salary for college graduates in 2020 was $55,260.

"It was really important for me to start an affordable line," said Crowe. "None of the pieces in my collections exceed $100. And on the career-services side, most options are less than $200."

"What excites me most is seeing my clients doing what they love, and earning what they deserve," she added. When asked where she sees C. Suite in five years, she responded, "I want C. Suite to be synonymous with career advancement. When someone wants a new career, a new job or higher salary, they should think C. Suite."

Leigh Davenport: Scripting Stories on Ambitious Black Women

BY KIA G. SMITH, C'2004

Leigh Davenport, C'2005, understands the diversity of Black womanhood.

“That’s something I experienced at Spelman College, and something I’m super passionate about in storytelling,” shared the creator and executive producer of the critically acclaimed STARZ’s comedy, “Run the World.” “There’s just so much diversity among us, and so much storytelling that hasn’t been done.”

While telling the stories of Black women has always been a part of Davenport’s plan, television and filmmaking weren’t originally the focus.

“I wanted to work in magazines! I’d interned at magazines,” said Davenport, who is the former editor in chief of The Spelman Spotlight (the student newspaper currently known as “The Blueprint”) who had told friends she wanted to be the editor of Vanity Fair.

“I graduated in 2005, and magazines were folding, so I took a job at VH1 as a production assistant in their unscripted department,” she said.

Davenport immediately fell in love with television.

“I loved production. I loved storytelling. I loved combining music, writing and images,” she exclaimed. But as nonscripted television morphed into reality television, Davenport decided to shift to digital storytelling and worked as the editorial director at HelloBeautiful.com.

It was during this time she began teaching herself to write screenplays and began drafting the earliest versions of “Run the World.” At this same time, ambitious Black women were being critiqued by media and self-proclaimed relationship experts.

“All of a sudden, being an educated, beautiful woman was a negative,” Davenport explained. “It was really negative, reinforced storytelling. It just felt like hysteria. I wanted to counter that, to give us some fullness and give us some range.”

Davenport, who’d always been drawn to storytelling due to its ability to change hearts and minds, only had to look to her circle of Spelman sisters to find the inspiration for the characters who would help counter the negative ambitious-Black-woman narrative. Inspired by her post-graduate experience in Harlem at The New School University, where she pursued a master’s in media studies/management, she began creating smart, ambitious, quick-witted, well-rounded and relatable characters who were navigating friendships, careers, and relationships in New York City — sans the hysteria of being too successful.

After years of nurturing her passion project, Davenport — determined to bring these characters to life — quit her job and moved to Los Angeles, where she was introduced to “Living Single” creator, Yvette Lee Bowser. Bowser is now the showrunner for “Run the World.”

“I really wanted us to have a thing that felt like us,” she said. “So, when people tell me it feels like them or their friends, it makes me really happy.”

The Chicago native and ever-evolving storyteller has written the screenplay for Lifetime’s “Wendy Williams: The Movie” and the upcoming Netflix film, “The Perfect Find,” starring Gabrielle Union. The wordsmith continues to evolve. She plans to add director to her repertoire.

Kia G. Smith, C'2004, is an Atlanta-based writer and content strategist. She currently works as vice-president of communications at Faith in Public Life.

Sherina Edwards: Journeying to Being CEO

WRITTEN BY VICKIE G. HAMPTON
REPORTED BY FRANK MCCOY

Sherina Maye Edwards, C'2005, comes from a family where major moves were key to opening doors of opportunities.

Her grandparents were part of the wave of half a million West Indians who, escaping the grinding poverty of Jamaica, sailed to England in the 1940s seeking better futures for themselves and their children. They answered the British government's post-war call for workers in the transport system, postal and health services and essentially helped changed the face of modern Britain.

Four decades later, Edwards' parents embarked on a similar journey, this time seeking the American dream in the United States.

In 2021, Edwards made a major, life-altering move of her own when she became the first Black, woman president and CEO of INTREN, one of the nation's largest women-owned utility specialty companies.

As astounding of an achievement that it is, it gets even better. Later in 2021, INTREN was sold to MasTech, a Fortune 500 company. Edwards, who retained her CEO role at INTREN, became one of only three Black female CEOs of a Fortune 500 company in the country. The other two are a fellow Spelman sister, Rosalind Brewer, C'84, CEO of Walgreens Boots Alliance, and Thasunda Brown Duckett, president and CEO of TIAA.

Her forebears may never have imagined that one of their own would achieve such a rarefied status. But Edwards is the living, breathing personification of their multi-generational dream — one that they crossed seas, endured culture shock and racism, and struggled to acclimate in a strange land to achieve.

RIGHT MOVES, BIG STEPS

Edwards saw the first glimpse of who she inspired to be by watching Phylicia Rashad play the classy, smart, and accomplished Clair Huxtable on "The Cosby Show."

"I loved watching Clair as a role model," she recalled. "She was an equal partner to Cliff, and I saw that she could be a nurturing mom and a lawyer. Her character inspired me to go to law school."

But first, the right college. To Edwards, that meant enrolling at Spelman, which she considered the mecca of Black female social engineering. Spelman's mission resonated with her and echoed her mother's admonition: "You will not be successful unless you constantly cultivate and assist other people to rise as well."

"Spelman taught me about leadership as a place that was the epitome of Black excellence to do the right thing for the world," she said. "On campus, everyone from the staff to the professors encouraged, nurtured, and expected you to succeed."

After graduating cum laude from Spelman with a degree in psychology, Edwards earned the J.D. from Howard University Law School.

In 2013, when she was a fourth-year law associate at Locke Lord LLP, a major Chicago law firm, the chief of staff to Illinois governor, Patrick Quinn, asked her to accept a five-year term on the Illinois Commerce Commission. The ICC job is to balance consumers and utilities interests in the Illinois energy supplier market.

Mentors immediately advised her to make the move, saying, "This is a lifetime step. Take it." To this day, she still does not know the anonymous sponsor who apparently had the ear of the governor.

But the step was indeed a big one. Edwards became the youngest person ever and the second person of color to become ICC commissioner in Illinois history.

In 2016, she became a member of the Greater Chicago Leadership class, where she made connections with other rising public, private and nonprofit stars across Chicagoland. That year, she was appointed by President Barack Obama and U.S. Secretary of Transportation Anthony Foxx to co-chair the U.S. Department of Transportation's Voluntary Information-Sharing System Working Group.

Additionally, Edwards was instrumental in the creation of the Women's Energy Summit, Illinois Utilities Business Diversity Council, and the ICC Office of Diversity and Community Affairs. In 2017, with three years of experience in the energy sector, she became a founding member of the Women's Energy Network Chicago.

"I saw a void of women in the industry and created the Chicago chapter," said Edwards, who is also a member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority and the YPO, a global CEO group, and serves on the board of directors of Southwest Water Co.

CONNECTIONS AND REPRESENTATION

The hallmark of Edwards' journey to becoming a CEO is connections.

In 1988, while serving on the Illinois commission, Edwards met Loretta Rosenmayer, founder and then-CEO of INTREN. It turned out to be a crucial connection in her career because, a little more than three decades later, Rosenmayer appointed Edwards as CEO.

In fact, making the right connections are so important that Edwards freely shares pearls of wisdom regarding them.

"Learn that your network is your net worth," she said. "Don't wait until a LinkedIn status changes to connect, and write [how-are-you notes] handwritten, not digital. They show you took the time," she said.

Another gem: "Don't ask someone to be your mentor. If you put in the work and gain experience, they will find you," she said.

"Young women need to understand that coaches speak to you daily; mentors point out your potential; and sponsors speak about you when you are not even in the same room," she explained.

She also advises Black women who want to rise in corporate America not to gravitate only toward people who look like them.

"Instead, be confident and brave and engage someone with whom you have the least in common in your age, race, gender or ethnicity," she said.

Edwards, heeding the wisdom of her mother and the mission of her alma mater to make a difference, is committed to serving as a mentor. She mentors Girl Scout groups, as well as public school students in Chicago and Northwest Indiana.

"It is important for young girls of color to meet me," she said.

"You can't be inspired by what you can't see. They need to see that I am a Black female lawyer."

Hana S. Sharif: Theatrical Savant

Hana Sharif, C'2000, has a multifaceted theater career that includes roles as an artistic leader, director, playwright and producer. From 1997 to 2003, she served as the co-founder and artistic director of Nasir Productions, a theater dedicated to underrepresented voices challenging traditional structure.

She joined the Tony Award-winning regional theater, Hartford Stage, in 2003. During her decadelong tenure at Hartford Stage, Sharif served as the associate artistic director, director of New Play Development and artistic producer. She launched the new play development program, expanded the community engagement, civic discourse initiatives, and developed and produced Tony, Grammy, Pulitzer, and Obie Award-winning shows.

Starting in 2012, she served as program manager at ArtsEmerson, a leading world theater company based at Boston's Emerson College.

Sharif was Baltimore Center Stage's associate artistic director from 2014 to 2019 and was the architect of the innovative CS Digital program: a platform that pushes the boundaries of traditional theater and looks at the nexus point between art and technology. Her other achievements at Baltimore Center Stage include prototyping the Mobile Unit focused on historically underserved audiences, strengthening community engagement, producing multiple world and regional premieres, and helping to guide the theater through a multimillion dollar building renovation and rebranding effort.

Sharif became the first Black woman to lead a major regional theater in 2018 when she was named the Augustin Family Artistic Director of The Repertory Theatre of St. Louis. During her tenure at The Rep, Hana has guided the organization through a strategic alignment, expanding access to underserved communities and centering equity and antiracism as the organization's foundational values.

She holds a bachelor's from Spelman College and an MFA from the University of Houston. She is the recipient of the 2009–2010 Aetna New Voices Fellowship, EMC Arts Working Open Fellowship, and Theatre Communications Group, New Generations Fellowship, and a founding member of The Black Theatre Commons. She serves on the board of directors for the TCG, BTC, and the Sprott Foundation.

Susan Spell: Focusing a Beauty Practice on Melanated Hues

BY ALICIA SANDS LURRY

Dr. Susan Spell (formerly Evans), C'1988, is clearly at the top of her profession. A renowned dermatologist, internationally acclaimed healthy skin and beauty expert, and director of dermatology at Dr. Susan 90210, Spell is widely known for her exclusive, medical-grade, skin-care system, state-of-the-art cosmetic and antiaging treatments, and array of products that improve overall skin tone and texture.

Committed to helping her patients look and feel their best, Spell remains steadfast about her mission to treat and beautify all skin, especially melanated hues.

"There's not a lot of focus on caring for skin of color, so it takes extra effort," she said. "In fields that involve the heart or the lungs, treatment is pretty much the same — no matter what your race. But when it comes to skin and hair, there's a difference."

This Spelman alumna has made quite the name for herself globally, first as an expert espousing the wonders of cosmetic and skin-care treatments on shows like "Oprah," "The Dr. Oz Show" and "Dr. 90210," and now as an esteemed dermatologist who both understands, successfully treats, and manages the complexities associated with melanated skin.

As one of the country's leading Black medical professionals, Spell's influence will be seen on "Beverly Hills M.D." This nonscripted, medical reality TV series stars "Dr. Susan," as she is affectionately known, and Dr. David Matlock, a world-renowned, African American cosmetic surgeon. Both starred in the wildly popular "Dr. 90210," which aired for seven seasons on the E! network and attracted millions of viewers in 22 countries.

According to the description, "Beverly Hills M.D." will "spotlight how skin treatments and cosmetic surgeries transform and impact the self-images and goals of patients, most of whom live outside one of the nation's most affluent ZIP codes." The show features Spell and Matlock as they practice on diverse patients, including patients of color not often featured in a medical reality series. The pilot is currently being shopped to various networks, and may air this fall.

"I wanted it to be called 'Black Doctors of Beverly Hills' because we're so minutely represented in most of television," said Spell, whose celebrity clients include Angela Simmons and Alicia Keys. "There's 'Beverly Hills Housewives,' but lately we just don't have that much representation, and we're a huge part of Beverly Hills. We're underrepresented. The Beverly Hills community is really full of Black folk."

Regardless of whether the show is picked up, Spell plans to continue treating patients with state-of-the-art cosmetic and beauty treatments in her private practice. With a unique background that includes internal medicine and dermatology training at Harvard Medical School, Morehouse School of Medicine, and New York University, Spell is an innovative skin-care creator who provides Botox, nonsurgical face lifts, eye lifts, laser treatments, chemical peels and more.

In addition to those cosmetic procedures, Spell also treats post-inflammatory hyperpigmentation, melasma, dark acne scarring, eczema, dry skin and other skin conditions affecting people of color.

She recalls an African American patient who was afraid of being burned by a laser, so Spell avoided the treatment altogether.

"I've seen a lot of instances where people don't know what to do for skin of color, so I'm glad I can be there for people who need that," she said. "Plenty of people tell me they were told they had to live with their skin condition, but I tell them they do not."

Although a cosmetic dermatologist by training, Spell's takes a holistic approach in her practice.

"I take the approach where my work is more than just skin deep," said Spell, who opened her practice in 1999. "I like to work inside out, because I'm trying to treat more than just your skin problems. My patients' overall health is just as important."

Spell says the Spelman College experience provided her with a strong academic foundation and an unbreakable sisterhood. The Los Angeles native arrived at Spelman's gates thanks to her father's insistence.

"My father wanted me to see the positive things the South had to offer. I trusted him, and I'm glad I did," said the Spelman natural sciences/environmental studies major.

"I loved Spelman, and Spelman made me uniquely proud of who I am," she continued. "I now take such pride and confidence in being a Black woman who people admire, and I'm confident in who I am because of Spelman's imprint."

Na'Taki Osborne Jelks: Scholar-Activist for Environmental Justice

BY ADRIENNE HARRIS

While Na'Taki Osborne Jelks, Ph.D., C'95, was living in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, she developed light-colored splotches on her skin that her doctor diagnosed as hypopigmentation. Even after biopsies, allergy tests and changes to her diet, the cause of her condition remained a mystery. After a few years, Jelks moved from Baton Rouge and her symptoms disappeared.

When her mother developed breast cancer, Jelks started wondering if there might be a connection between the environment and the diseases that plague many people who live in "cancer alley," the 85-mile corridor between Baton Rouge and New Orleans that is home to more than 100 chemical and petrochemical facilities.

"The pollution index was always high, the air smelled bad, and the water smelled and tasted bad," said Jelks. "I can't prove that what we might have been exposed to was the reason for my mother's diagnosis, but the fact that the possibility existed gave me the impetus to get involved in investigating how the environment can impact our health."

Jelks attended Spelman as a dual-degree chemistry and engineering student and received bachelor's degrees from Spelman and the Georgia Institute of Technology. She went on to earn a master's in public health from Emory University and doctorate in public health from Georgia State University.

Today, Jelks is assistant professor in Spelman's Department of Environmental and Health Sciences. Recently, she was named one of the Excellence in Ecology Scholars by the Ecological Society of America.

"A big premise of my work is using science as a tool for environmental policy and systems change," she said. "When I talk about being a scholar-activist, I'm not interested in science just for the sake of new discoveries. My work is more in the applied realm. How can I use the science we have – or generate new science – to solve the problem of exposure to environmental toxicants, which has a disproportionate impact on low-income communities and communities of color?"

In addition to her duties at Spelman, Jelks is actively involved in community science and environmental justice through two organizations she co-founded in 2001. She is adviser to Earth Tomorrow Atlanta, a National Wildlife Federation program that helps to develop young people as environmental change agents, and board chair of the West Atlanta Watershed Alliance, a volunteer group that promotes environmental stewardship, education and justice.

Jelks trains local youth and adults to collect water and air samples, assess the impact of pollutants on their communities and press for change.

"I wouldn't be the leader I am today if it wasn't for Na'Taki," said Donna Stephens, co-chair of the Proctor Creek Stewardship Council, which works to preserve and restore the creek and its tributaries that run through 38 highly industrialized, African American neighborhoods. "She encourages me to speak up and speak out."

With Jelks' support, Proctor Creek residents have successfully lobbied for the closure of a wastewater treatment facility and the creation of new parks and green spaces.

"Environmental justice is about righting the wrongs that have come from centuries of systemic racism and how that plays out," said Jelks. "Community science and community training and education help people advocate for the solutions they want to see happen."

Bernice King: Finding Her Identity, Sisterhood and Purpose

BY MAYNARD EATON

Bernice A. King is a proud 1985 Spelman graduate, but it almost didn't happen.

It was fate and cold weather that ultimately found the revered King Center CEO at the nation's premier historically Black college for women, on the rebound from Iowa's Grinnell College where she got a false start.

"I went to Grinnell because Uncle Andy [former Atlanta mayor and civil rights icon Andrew Young] spoke there, and the Black Student Union said, 'We would like to have more Black students on our campus.' So, I told my mom, 'I'll go.' She said, 'Do you want to visit?' I said, 'No, I trust Uncle Andy.'"

I should have listened to my mother."

'RUNNING AWAY FROM MY IDENTITY'

Her mother is the late, esteemed Coretta Scott King, creator and visionary of the King Center, which was founded as The Center for Nonviolent Social Change in 1968.

When King arrived on the Grinnell campus, "in the middle of nowhere," she found an all-White population of 17,000 students "except for the 54 of us Black students and faculty at the school. That was a cultural shock."

The move to a White environment after graduating from Atlanta's predominately Black Frederick Douglass High School caused her to have an existential self-discovery.

"I was trying to run away from my King identity, and probably even, my Black identity," said King. "Then, when I got to Grinnell and noticed the Black students there didn't know they were Black, I said, 'Oh, I need to go back around Black people.' It just solidified my identity as a Black woman and not trying to run away from that anymore."

"I cried for two weeks because I wanted to come home, and that's when Mother reminded me of Spelman," King recalled. "Ironically, Spelman had an exchange program with Grinnell that I knew nothing about."

Surprisingly, Donald Stewart, then-president of Spelman College, was a graduate of Grinnell. It seemed to be divine intervention.

King started Spelman the second semester of her freshman year in 1982 as a commuter student.

'FEELING A PART OF THE SISTERHOOD'

King admitted, it took her some time for her to catch up and really feel like part of the Spelman community. She ran for vice president of Student Government in her junior year. This proved to be a jumpstart for her life's activism work, much like Morehouse College was for her late father, Martin Luther King Jr., decades earlier.

"My last two years were my most impactful years," said King, who was elected SGA vice president in her senior year.

"It was like an incubator for my social activism. I arranged a few voters' registration drives, and of course my generation at that time was heavily involved in the anti-apartheid movement."

King fondly remembered inviting Nelson Mandela's daughters to a special event at Morehouse's King Chapel, while she was heading the College & University Conference for The King Center.

"I had Mandela's daughters; Oprah Winfrey was one of the guests as well, but it was an anti-apartheid rally event for both Morehouse and Spelman students," said King about the event, admitting feeling a part of the sisterhood. "It did nurture me in terms of leadership in taking on that role as the student government vice president."

King recently received an honorary doctorate from Spelman April 7, and Grinnell College has invited her to be its commencement speaker this year and will also bestow her with an honorary doctorate.

"Kind of ironic that they are both happening in the same year," she laughed.

Spelman is a family tradition for the extended King family. King's great grandmother, Jenny P. Williams, was a product of what was then Spelman Seminary, and her grandmother, Alberta Williams King, attended Spelman. King's aunt, Christine King Farris, C'48, was a professor there when she was a student. In addition, she and her cousin, Angela Farris Watkins, Ph.D., C'86, were Spelman students at the same time.

FAMILY BUSINESS MATTERS

King now heads the family business as CEO and public persona of The King Center.

"It has been in my cultural DNA since I was 5," she said.

As CEO, King continues to advance her parents' legacy of nonviolent social change through policy, advocacy and research, as well as education and training through the "Kingian" philosophy of nonviolence, which she re-branded Nonviolence365® (NV365®).

Under her leadership, the Center has implemented numerous initiatives reaching over 500,000 people around the world, including the Beloved Community Leadership Academy, Students with King, NV365® Education & Training and The Beloved Community Talks, a courageous conversations platform about the difficult racial and social justice issues impacting our world. King led the development of an NV365® certification program for trainers, which provides individuals with the opportunity to teach the NV365® curriculum on behalf of The King Center. She is also an instructor and a trainer for the program.

"I am a true legacy bearer," King asserted. "I'm seeing myself as the last born and trying to be very true to the foundation of what [The King Center] was created to do. That's why when I came in, I said, 'Daddy wanted the world to understand that this was not part of a movement, but nonviolence is necessary for us to create a just, equitable, humane and peaceful world.' We must do that by infusing it into every environment, and all our different cultures, everyplace."

Tendayi Kuumba: An ‘Unpredictable Journey’ to Broadway

BY VICKIE G. HAMPTON

When she was 15, Tendayi Kuumba, C’2010, set her sights on Broadway. She already had the moves and chops to make it there.

She began dancing at age 3 and made her musical theater debut at 7. By age 10, she snagged her first role in a jazz opera.

After attending the North Atlanta High School of Performing Arts, she matriculated to Spelman to study drama and dance. Fast forward eight years — after multiple stints choreographing and performing for various New York dance companies — and the multitasking, self-described “old soul” received an offer that landed her on a clear path to the Great White Way.

David Byrne, who needed to add to his band of mostly musicians a dancer and vocalist for his critically acclaimed “David Byrne’s American Utopia,” asked her to join his show, which at the time was on a 27-country tour.

“The journey has been unpredictable,” said Kuumba. “The call came at a time when I was least focused on getting to Broadway. It’s when I started focusing on my own creations that it came along — when I was at my most in terms of owning myself as an artist. And it came in a nonconventional way. I’m glad my name was in the right room, and I had the right network.”

The role as a dancer and vocalist was a natural progression in Kuumba’s career. Before joining Byrne’s tour, she performed and choreographed with Urban Bush Women, which connects movement, sound and storytelling.

“It’s second nature to me to have music, dance, movement all in the same chord,” said Kuumba, whose dance background is a combination of modern ballet, tap, hip-hop and West African, and whose musical background is jazz and musical theater.

In September 2021, “American Utopia,” which received a Special Tony Honor, returned to Broadway at the St. James Theatre (it premiered at the Hudson Theater in 2019) ... and it was curtain-up on Kuumba’s Broadway dream.

She also was in Spike Lee’s acclaimed film version of the concert, which won two 2021 Primetime Creative Arts awards and was nominated for a 2022 Grammy award. The film made its world premiere opening at the 2020 Toronto International Film Festival; began streaming on HBO Max in fall 2020; and played in movie theaters nationwide for a one-night-only theatrical event Sept. 15, 2021.

Just two weeks after “American Utopia” closed on April 3, 2022, Kuumba was playing Lady in Brown in Ntozake Shange’s “for colored girls who have considered suicide / when the rainbow is enuf,” which ran through June 5 at the Booth Theatre.

Broadway is replete with entertainers who are triple threats, but as an actress, dancer/choreographer, vocalist and songwriter, Kuumba is a rare quadruple threat. She credits the “beautiful liberal arts” experience she received at Spelman for her versatility.

“Knowing we were not at a conservatory made us push our love for the arts even more,” she said. “It also gave us the freedom to do many different things,” including pursuing different disciplines and collaborating across genres.

The experience also wove together a close-knit community of SpelHouse friends, who more than a decade ago helped Kuumba heal from a terrible accident that threatened her dance career and who, today, are coming to see her dance across the Broadway stage.

“I love what Spelman has been to me in terms of a sisterhood, as a HBCU family, as a community,” she said. “They don’t always think of HBCUs in the arts community, but there are many of us out here supporting each other.”

Calida Rawles: Her Signature Art's Rippling Effects

BY LARRY CALHOUN

In grade school, Calida Rawles, C'98, drew popular cartoons requested by her classmates and personalized with their names. She charged them 50 cents a drawing with a next-day delivery. Now, the graphic artist-turned-acclaimed painter produces works on her own timeline that are often sold before they're completed, at costs ranging from $90,000 to $350,000.

Rawles, a native of Wilmington, Delaware, who resides in Los Angeles, holds a bachelor's in art from Spelman and a master's in art from New York University. She said she came for a visit to Spelman after acceptance and fell in love with the College.

"Spelman became a home away from home where you can find the freedom to be yourself," Rawles reflected.

Using mostly large-scale images in acrylic on canvas, Rawles is a self-described figurative painter. She explores the subjects of racism, Black womanhood and colorism with hidden messages of topical events not always obvious to viewers. Because of her commitment to social justice, posters of her work have been sold to generate funding for such advocacy as Black Lives Matter and voter registration.

To begin a new piece, using a friend's swimming pool, Rawles submerges her subject and uses a waterproofed iPhone to take photos, sometimes up to 500 for one piece of art. She then creates portraits from the photography. Her daughters have served as talent or as photography assistants, creating the waves in the pool.

Rawles says she feels most free in the water, although she didn't learn to swim until later in adulthood. She bristles at the high percentage of Blacks — and especially Black children — who cannot swim. To combat the past discrimination of closed beaches and pools to Black people, she uses her images to show we belong in water, too.

The painter said Spelman's fine arts program was essential in fostering her accomplishments as an artist.

"My professors and mentors, especially Dr. Arturo Lindsey, Charnell Holloway, Frank Toby Martin and Lev Mills, were such great support. I wouldn't be the artist I am today without them. They believed in me and, in turn, I began to believe in myself," Rawles said.

"Spelman is the mother ship," she added. "It's the source where I can always go back to get re-charged, re-energized."

Rawles' art has been included in various high-profile exhibitions, including a recent mural unveiled at SoFi Stadium in Inglewood, California, during the Super Bowl LVI weekend.

Larry Calhoun is a strategic communications and special projects consultant, a Morehouse Man and Spelman uncle.

Throughout her career, Rawles worked as a successful graphic artist. In 2015, she became a full-time painter with studio space and a signature realist look for her paintings, using rippling water as her lens to view the expressions of joy and sorrow in Black life.

"Water holds a duality in the Black experience, from those enslaved Africans who didn't survive the Middle Passage and jumped overboard, to Jim Crow laws that restricted Blacks from public pools and beaches," Rawles said. "Yet, we know water can nourish and heal, and represent a physical and spiritual cleansing and transformation."

The beauty and serenity of her work led her friend, Ta-Nehisi Coates, to use one of her painting on his best-selling The Water Dancer.

Lauren Wesley Wilson: Connecting Black Communicators

KIA G. SMITH, C'2004

In May 2011, Lauren Wesley Wilson, C'2007, organized an invite-only luncheon in Washington, D.C., where vice president of BET Networks Tara Jones, C'1994, was the keynote speaker. Black women working in the communications and media industry gathered with one question in mind: How can we work together?

"We made these luncheons collaborative. We went around the room and everyone introduced themselves and shared their needs – whether they needed a contact with The New York Times, needed to learn how to be on panels, or were looking for a hairstylist," Wilson shared as she reminisced on this first gathering. "Someone in the room had what you needed, so

30. Well, how was I going to do that if I didn't see any people of color as vice president?"

After a year of attempting to connect with a senior-level professional who she wanted to mentor her (only to realize they didn't have the chemistry and connection needed for a successful mentoring relationship), Wilson realized there should be an easier way to form these relationships.

"There had to be an easier way to connect women at all levels, get executive women together in a room to see if there was chemistry, see if we could learn from them and find mentors."

To date, ColorComm Inc., home of the ColorComm Network, has served 100,000 professionals, providing them with the opportunity to connect, develop and grow in their careers. These opportunities are facilitated through ColorComm Network, ColorComm Executive Conference, ColorComm NextGen Summit, ColorComm Media Group, and Men of Color in Communications Community.

"The ColorComm community is intergenerational with members spanning between the ages of 22 to 65. Our programs and initiatives meet you at any and every stage of your career," Wilson said. "This includes an HBCU fellowship program where we partner with 16 HBCUs, including Spelman College. We target juniors, seniors and students who are one to three years out of college for professional development and pair them with Fortune 500 and media companies for job opportunities."

Wilson understands the importance of making these connections early and holding on to them for a lifetime.

"It's not just about doing your job and going home after work. It's about how you develop relationships that are meaningful and long-lasting with the people you see every day or people that you don't see every day – to learn from others, to share tools, to call on people, to have [access to] people at every stage. That's important," she said.

you would leave feeling like this networking experience was mutually beneficial. We weren't just coming to the table and taking something away."

This initial gathering of 34 women at various stages in their career quickly grew into the ColorComm Network, a national professional membership organization with local chapters in New York, Washington, D.C., Chicago, Atlanta, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Dallas, Houston, Miami and London. The ColorComm Network provides its 2,000 financial members with direct access to leaders and decision-makers in the communications, public relations, marketing, advertising and media industries.

"One of my biggest needs at the time was having a community of people who understood the work I did," Wilson shared. "I didn't see people of color who looked like me where I worked. One of my goals at that time was to become a vice president by

Maya Smith: Securing Clients

An associate at the Detroit-based law firm of Butzel Long, Maya Smith, C'2016, concentrates her practice in the areas of intellectual property and emerging technology, including data protection and cybersecurity.

She assists clients on compliance and enforcement matters, cyber risk-management, investigation breach and response, and emerging technologies. Smith also assists on trademark prosecution, copyright filing, technology licensing and intellectual property litigation.

A graduate of Western Michigan University Cooley Law School, Smith was an active member of the Black Law Student Association and the Sports and Entertainment Law Society and served on its Law Review. She received her bachelor's in political science from Spelman.

Prior to law school, Smith worked as a legislative aide for the Georgia State Representative of the 62nd District. At Spelman, she volunteered with Advocacy for Action, working as a case manager and serving as the Georgia executive director for Operations for the Grl-Pwr Foundation.

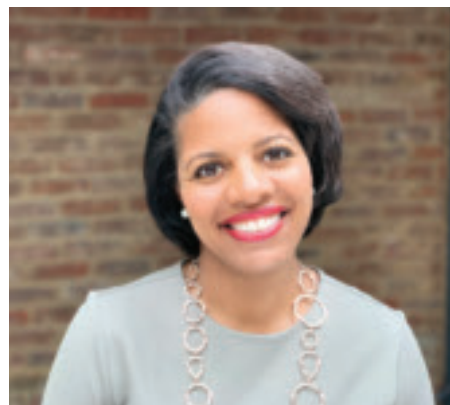

Jolawn Victor: Creating Headspace

Jolawn Victor, C'2004, is the chief international officer at Headspace, based out of the company's UK office, where she leads operations, including sales, marketing and partnerships around the world (excluding the U.S. and Canada). Before Headspace, Victor led Emerging Markets and Global Expansion for Intuit, where she was responsible for business in more than 150 countries outside of the U.S. She joined Headspace as a product leader in 2020 with 18 years of engineering, marketing and innovation experience from the consumer-packaged goods industry.

Victor previously worked at PepsiCo, where she led the potato chip innovation business on the $3.5 billion Lay's brand. She launched customer favorites, including Lay's Poppables, habanero, and lightly salted flavors. Her role focused on driving global share and profit growth through crafting a three-year innovation strategy. Before her time at PepsiCo, Victor worked as a project engineer at General Mills managing small-medium-capital projects to drive innovation and productivity, including with popular Cheerios cereal and Progresso soup.

A dual-degree engineering major in physics and electrical engineering, Victor attended Spelman and Georgia Tech. She attended Stern's School of Business at New York University, where she graduated in 2009 with a marketing concentrated MBA.

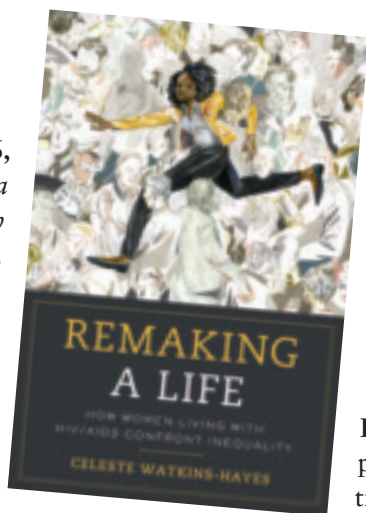

Dr. Celeste Watkins-Hayes, C'96, has written a book, Remaking a Life: How Women Living with HIV/AIDS Confront Inequality, that uses the HIV/AIDS epidemic as a lens to understanding how women achieve in the face of social stigma and economic disadvantage. The book was published in 2019 by the University of California Press.

Drawing on interviews with nationally recognized AIDS activists and policy experts, as well as women living with HIV/AIDS, Watkins-Hayes takes readers on an uplifting journey that chronicles the fight for women's physical, emotional, economic and political survival.

The book also provides strategies to encourage private, nonprofit, and government agencies to successfully collaborate, and shares policy ideas with the hope of alleviating the injuries of inequality faced by those living with HIV/AIDS every day.

Remaking a Life speaks to the profound success of the HIV/AIDS community over the past 40 years, and how it can serve as a roadmap for combatting today's public health crises.

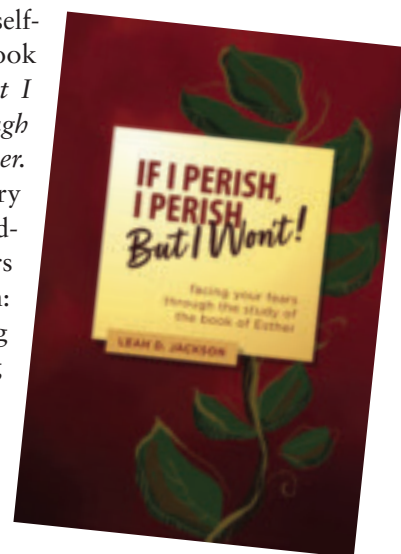

What if she messes up? Or worse, if she can't bring herself to speak up, like sometimes happens when facing bullies at school?

Stacey learns that win or lose, her words are powerful, and sometimes perseverance is the most important word of all.

Apparently, it is a lesson that has served Abrams well.

Leah D. Jackson, C'2002, has self-published an inspirational book titled If Perish, I Perish, But I Won't! Facing Your Fears Through the Study of the Book of Esther.

The book, published February 2022, is designed to help readers confront their fears and offers daily devotionals, among them: naming, better understanding then facing your fears; homing in on your assignment or call; and applying the Word of God into your daily life.

Stacey Abrams, C'95, the iconic voting-rights advocate and bestselling author, has written a children's book titled Stacey's Extraordinary Words, published in December 2021 by Balzer + Bray. The book, for readers 4 to 9 (preschool to 3rd grade), is already a No. 1 New York Times bestseller and NAACP Image Award winner.

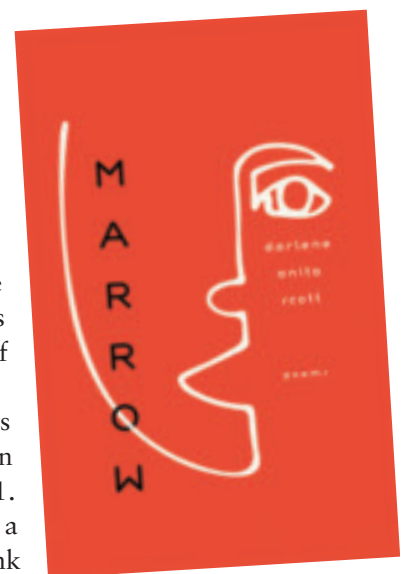

Based on her own childhood, this debut picture book from Abrams is an inspiring tale of determination. It tells of a little girl, Stacey, who loves words — loves reading them, loves sounding them out, and loves the comfort they bring when things are hard.

When she is chosen to compete in the local spelling bee, Stacey isn't as excited as she thought she would be.

A poet, visual artist, and professor of composition and creative writing, Darlene Anita Scott, C'97, has written Marrow: Poems (Contemporary Poetry and Prose) to pay tribute to the 900 men, women, and children who perished during the Jonestown murder-suicide Nov. 18, 1978. The book was published by University Press of Kentucky, March 8, 2022.

The Jonestown massacre was the largest mass loss of American lives before Sept. 11, 2001. Although the events inspired a common idiom in "Don't drink the Kool-Aid," the personal histories of those who were lost have been treated as a footnote to the tragedy; little has been written about those individuals and their lived experiences.

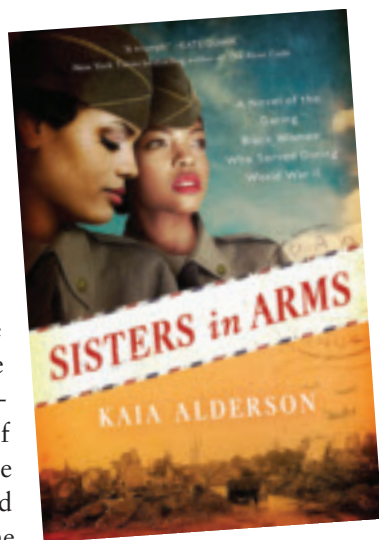

In this profound and provocative poetry collection, Scott honors these people by amplifying the voices of the children, teenagers and adults whose hopes, dreams and lives were just as hopeful and mundane as any others, yet have been overlooked and overshadowed by the circumstances of their untimely loss. The poetry in Marrow cuts to the bone, while being distinctive, haunting and unforgettable.

Kaia Alderson, C'98, is the author of Sisters in Arms: A Novel of the Daring Black Women Who Served During World War II. William Morrow Paperbacks, Aug. 3, 2021. Her debut historical fiction novel is based on the true story of the 6888th Postal Battalion (the Six Triple Eight), the only all-Black, female U.S. battalion of the Women's Army Corps to be deployed overseas during World War II. The battalion made the dangerous voyage to Europe to ensure American servicemen received word from their loved ones.

In Sisters in Arms, protagonists Grace Steele and Eliza Jones are from completely different backgrounds, but are on common ground being among the first class of female officers and the first Black women allowed to serve in the Army. As they help form the 6888th Central Postal Directory Battalion, they deal with more than just Army bureaucracy. The two Northern women learn to navigate their way through the segregated organization. With everyone around them determined to see their experiment fail, they knew there was no room for error.

In The Legend of the White Dove, author Rashida R. Rawls, C'2003, tells the story of 14-year-old Amy, who is on a mission to solve a family mystery. With Dad unemployed and Mom focused on the twins, Amy lands a great babysitting job to help her family. She watches as Dad works hard to find a new job — yet he always seems to have money. The young protagonist is determined to get to the bottom of this mystery. What happens next is why the legend still lives. The book was self-published in February 2021.

Claudia Walker, C'99, is the author of The ABCs of Black Wall Street, a rare hybrid picture book that offers young readers both a lesson on the alphabet and on Black history. It embarks on a nostalgic trip through the heart of Tulsa's historic Greenwood District. From Madam C.J. Walker and O.W. Gurley to Williams Dreamland Theater and Osborne Monroe's Roller Skating Rink, readers learn about the innovators, activists and establishments that created one of America's wealthiest Black communities.

Reelaviolette Botts-Ward (formerly Brittany "Reeci" Botts), C'2015, has written Mourning My Inner (Black Girl) Child, published by Nomadic Press February 2021. It provides an unabashed exposure of girlhood fragility, ancestral grieving and embodied remembering.

In her excavation of multiple pasts and multiple selves, Botts-Ward journeys through intimate encounters with her mother(s), her home, her body and her precarity. This book of poetry invites Black women deeper into their healing and centers the little girl within herself, who has a sacred word for the world.

Donor Roll 2021

Fiscal Year 2021 (July 1, 2020, through June 30, 2021) was a record-breaking fundraising year for Spelman College. More than $81.3 million was raised. We are deeply grateful and honored for the unwavering support from each of our contributors, several new leadership gifts, and for the pledges of more than $63.6 million that were made. Their undaunted efforts, along with yours, ensured that Spelman continued to ascend in challenging times. We truly cherish the support and commitment to sustain and advance our mission. These gifts are touching and changing the lives of our students as we execute our strategic goals of Delivering the Spelman Promise, Elevating the Spelman Difference, Enhancing Operational Excellence, and Promoting Academic Innovation. Delivering the Spelman Promise – to ensure that Spelman students who enter our gates have the opportunity to graduate and succeed beyond the Spelman gates – is our No. 1 objective. These four objectives continue to work hand in hand to uphold Spelman College's standard of excellence. Please join us in thanking the FY 2021 Leadership Donors.

A 2005 American studies graduate from Wesleyan University, Andrews joined Denver-based The Spirituals Project, a community-organized choir dedicated to the preservation and revitalization of sacred songs first sang by enslaved Americans in the 18th and 19th centuries.

“Singing spirituals and participating in that group made me really think about how some of those songs hold history and convey the realities of peoples’ lives during slavery more than any textbook ever could,” she said. “Singing those songs really instilled in me how important art is to life and to struggles for justice.”

Andrews’ foundational path to Spelman began to materialize as she matriculated at NYU Tisch School of the Arts, where she received a master’s in art politics in 2009. There, she encountered an artist, curator and scholar named Deborah Willis, Ph.D. At the time, Willis’ “Posing Beauty” exhibition (also featured at Spelman in 2013) was on view at Tisch. Its impressive view and perspective on current events and art had a lasting impact on Andrews.

In fall 2008, during the height of Barack Obama’s presidential election — which loomed heavily in Andrews’ headspace — she wanted to take a class offered by Willis, who was university professor and chair of the Department of Photography & Imaging at Tisch, but there was a problem.

“The class was called ‘Black Body and the Lens,’ thinking about how photography has shaped the way as a culture we see Black people, but the class was full,” said Andrews, remembering how the class covered everything from early photographs of slaveholders and the invention of photography, which offered Black people a way to envision themselves for the first time.

“I show up on the first day and we’re talking about the inauguration and its visual impact. So, I’m participating and contributing to the class even though I’m not officially enrolled in the class,” she said.

Andrews explained how this discussion heightened her desire to be a part of the class. Her window of opportunity opened when Willis gave out weekly assignments.

“She asks: ‘Who’s going to present next week?’ I replied, ‘I’ll present next week if you let me into the class,’ Andrews said. “She says, ‘You’re it,’ and the next week I presented.”

She put what she described as her “best foot forward” and offered a critique of the reading for that day. Willis pulled her to the side after class and said, “So, you’re going to get a Ph.D.,” recalled Andrews. “It wasn’t so much that it was a question, but a statement. I hadn’t really thought about it, and she said, ‘You should do that.’”

Well, Andrews did get her Ph.D. in cultural studies from George Mason University in 2019. Her doctorate in cultural studies — as opposed to art history — helped her move beyond “biography to dissecting how we got to a place where we see.” Cultural studies allows critical thought, she explained.

Willis has become one of her ardent supporters.

“Dr. Liz Andrews is a dedicated researcher, administrator and curator, [and] she is interested in engaging discussion about images and politics and further to consider the notion of images as an activist-iconic expression,” said Willis, who is also director for the Center for Black Visual Culture Africana/CAS Affiliate Faculty, Institute of Fine Arts Department of Art History at Tisch.

“In her most recent curatorial project, she successfully contextualized the voices and artistic vision of internationally recognized artists along with emerging artists by weaving their stories about identity and reinvention into a powerful exhibition at LACMA. Her range from the political to the artistic is amazing,” Willis said.

Andrews’ recent curatorial project, Black American Portraits, a companion to The Obama Portraits Tour, was exhibited at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, where she served as executive administrator for five years prior to Spelman. At LACMA, she also commissioned an augmented reality monument dedicated to Biddy Mason by Ada Pinkston, in addition to other projects.

For Andrews, Spelman is a culminating event, combining decades of study with practical application. She called it “a dream come true.”

“I’ve seen how the art world works, how museums work. I’ve also seen how universities work because I worked at NYU for several years, and worked at Mason while I was there,” said Andrews.

“So, I think the Spelman Museum has such a beautiful mission of centering Black women artists and students as the primary audience in addition to the general public — as opposed to an encyclopedic museum where your mission is all art, across all media, across all time. This is a very specific mission focused on artists of the African diaspora. How amazing is that?”

Renita Mathis is editor of the Spelman Messenger.
